THE INITIATION.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY D. D. EMMETT.

Come every one, and hear the fun,
This aint no dismal story;
Told by a friend, you may depend,
When he felt in his glory.
'Twas at the sign of "Dog and Cat," kept by Old Nibbs, the showman,
To take a signboard for a guide—Nibbs' was a peaceful omen.

Assembled there, from everywhere,
Were boys of every "bristle;"
But none came in without the tin,
With which to "wet their whistle."
'Twas here they "weeded" lots of "slang," and drained the flowing cup, sir,
And poured beanine and whiskey down, to keep their spirits up, sir.

A country lad sold all he had
To travel with a circus;
To town he came, both limp and lame,
Expressly for that purpose.
"Hotel de Nibbs" soon brought him up, where he could get instruction,
But first he had to treat the boys, before his introduction.

'Twas there and then old limpy Ben
Was sent for in hot haste, sir,
Ben hurried on, he might be gone—
There was no time to waste, sir.
But Ben soon hobbled in the room, as sober as a pastor,
Then "Country," he was introduced to Ben—as future master.

Says Ben, in turn, "What will y'e learn?
To ride, to leap, or tumble;
But first you must down with the dust,
These are my terms—don't grumble!"
"I've sold my farm, and got the cash, right freely will I pay it,
If I could larn to 'surkis ride,' and aint afeer'd to say it!"

Without delay, Ben got his pay,
And treated every man, sir—
If it's the rule to treat in school,
Ben's just the boy that can, sir—
'Twas then he got two "oiled sheets" in which to lay his pupil;
Says Country:—"What yer grease 'em for?" Says Ben:—"To make ye supple."

Up stairs all went, on mischief bent;
Ben headed the procession,
Silent and mute, none will dispute,
Like going to confession.
Then Country he was made to strip—all hands felt of his muscle—
'Twas then they sewed him in the sheets, but not without a tussle.

At every stitch in went "cow-itch,"
To keep him 'wake and nimble:
Big drops of sweat fell fast, you bet,
Each one would fill a thimble.
Then scratchety-scratch and digity-dig. "All right!" says Ben, most naively,
"Pile on more feather beds, my boys;" yet Country stood it bravely.

There Country lay and scratched away—
He thought of home and timber;
Ben gave a laugh—"Don't be a calf—
'Tis good to make ye limber."
"Do let me out! good surkit man, whoever is the boss! sir;"
They cleaned him with a curry-comb, just like you would a horse, sir.

All this abuse was of no use,
For Country, he was game, sir;
Come to the worst, he'd not be first
To blot his daddy's name, sir.
Whereupon the tug of war commenced, to get rid of him soon, sir;
They made him stand upon his head in Nibbs's old spittoon sir.

"You'll make a clown and can bring down
The house on all occasions."
Says Counterwe, "Just let me be!"
Says Ben:—"Come; no evasions."
Tar, chalk and paint was soon mixed up, and him they quickly painted,
In streaks that reached all round his head. Ben laughed until he fainted.

All things prepared, the floor was cleared,
And ring chalked in the centre;
Ring-master Ben says:—"Clear the pen!"
And Country made to enter.
They put a halter round his neck, for fear he might "take water,"
'Twas thus they led him in the ring, midst shouts and roars of laughter.

With mighty grip, Ben seized the whip,
And now the show begins, sir;
He cut his legs, then pardon begs,
While blood runs down his shins, sir.
"There, merryman, the horse has stopped, he wants something, I'll wager."
Crack goes the whip round Country's legs; he stood it like a major.

Some devilish way says, "Tell a tag!"
Says Country:—"Can't tell any;"
"O, yes you can," says master Ben,
"I know you have got many."
Then Country studied for a while, says he:—"I've one, by gosh, sir;
Throw up a punkin in the air, 'tis sure to come down squash, sir."

The whip came crack on Country's back
A dozen times or more, sir;
He gave a spring, which cleared the ring,
And bolted through the door, sir.
They tossed his bundle after him, but he paid no attention,
But what he lost upon the way (I do not choose to mention).

Then down Wells street he did retreat,
Each passer by would hit 'im;
So frightened he did seem to be,
He thought a mad dog bit 'im.
Some thought the mummy had broke out, and took the news to Aiken,
But Country he kept straight ahead, just like a streak o' bacon.

No, country boys, the circus joys
Are not just what they crack up;
Don't sell your truck, to trust to luck,
Nor yet don't get your back up.
And when "Hotel de Nibbs" you see, or view off from afar,
Say to the first man asks you in:—"Excuse me, I've been thar!"

CHAPTER XXXIV.

CHARLES STANFIELD'S AWAKENING.

"And you hate war, Miss Ellis?" said Charles Stanfield, as if he had been considering her speech ever since the time they had met. And, indeed, it had formed no small part of his meditations.

"I do."

"And everything connected with it?" he asked, wondering if she might take himself into consideration as a prominent part of the whole.

But Diana simply replied, laughingly:—

"Guns, swords, drums, powder, fortifications, everything—yes everything." And then she added, "but we will leave war alone for the present; and you must cast your eye over the lovely sweep of country before you. See how it stretches away to the south, dotted with villages; and here and there a windmill, or a grey tower, or slender spire. You must imagine the green in all their summer foliage; the chestnuts, with their plumes of white and the last sunrays shining over them, and almost blotting them out in a haze of gold. I do not think there is anything more beautiful than a sunset."

"Is there not?" asked Charles Stanfield. "Perhaps I do not agree with you."

"Ah! a sunrise, perhaps. I debated the point for a long time myself, and scarcely came to a conclusion. You prefer a sunrise, then?"

"I was not thinking of it."

And Charles Stanfield paused in the compliment he was about to pay, and wondered at himself—for it was a new language to him, and yet so easy to learn. Perhaps it was like the eloquence advocated by Pamet, that wanted only honesty of heart and purpose to carry it home to the hearers. Certainly he had found that:—

"Genuine feeling wants no arts
Of utterance, no toil of elocution."

No need for searching for words when one is in earnest, for do not the words come even as by inspiration?

Charles Stanfield and Diana had wandered along on the fine March morning, which seemed, as Diana said, to be made on purpose for her to show Broadmead in its early beauty. The frosty sharpness had gone out of the air, and there was no rough wind; and, though the sun shone brightly, it was not that cruel brightness that one often sees in the spring, but a mellow, softening light, that gave a warmer tint to every object. They had crossed the meadows, visited the church, passed through the village street, where Miss Letitia and Miss Sophia, gazing from the windows of Brierly House, had marked their progress, and had observed to one another what a terrible flirt Di was. They had entered at Jasper's liking it. Such things would not have been permitted in their time; but then, of course, they had Rebecca to look after them. And then, as Miss Lotty parenthetically remarked:—"There were no young men at Broadmead in those days."

And Diana nodded gaily to them, unsuspicious of the comments they were making; and made her way to the Marshwood Redoubt, where the first violets were already blowing, and, gathering a few of the sweet, she gave them to her companion, who felt that he was receiving a royal token.

Through the beeches, still towards the west, and up an opposite slope; and there Diana paused on the slight eminence, below which the country rolled out its green and gold for many and many a mile.

"One ought to feel quite happy, and at peace with every thing, on such a morning as this," said Diana. "Do you not feel so, Mr. Stanfield?"

"Of course—with such a guide," he answered, involuntarily.

Diana turned quickly. She was about to protest for the second time against compliments, but something in her companion's face made her pause. And then Signora Verri's words and advice flashed into her mind, and Jasper's jesting instruction. Had she been playing with a true heart? She had not intended it; but she began to feel remorseful; and she perceived, as she glanced at Charles Stanfield, that he looked very grave, and even somewhat agitated. And then the color came into her face, and for a moment her cheeks were burning; and again Charles Stanfield misinterpreted the blush. His tongue was unloosed, and he spoke with sudden eloquence. The words were in his heart and they sprang almost unconsciously to his lips, telling her of his love, his hope, his fear. It was all so unexpected that Diana could not stop him. It was spoken—and then there came a pause.

And Diana, with her eyes fixed on the ground, felt, as it were, a great chill steal over her and a heavy weight weighing her down. She tried to speak—she tried to raise her eyes, but in vain; her lips only quivered, and no sound issued from them.

They were standing on the very height where she and John Carteret, in those glorious summer days, had so often watched the sun go down—sometimes in royal purple and crimson, sometimes in the clear gold-hued heavens, without a fleck of color to mar its purity; but in whatsoever guise it disappeared, still leaving the same farewell promise, teaching the same lesson for ever and ever to the world it left in darkness as it sank to its western grave—"I shall arise again."

Diana remained for a short time spell-bound; and then she raised her eyes and looked straight into Charles Stanfield's eyes.

"I am very sorry, Mr. Stanfield. I had not the least idea—I did not know—I did not think that you would care for me."

And he read in her eyes, more than in her speech, an answer to his eloquent words—and not a favorable one. Yet he asked again:—

"Is there no hope?"

"Mr. Stanfield," said Diana, clasping her hands tightly, as though it in some way steadied her voice to do so, "you must not care about me—and yet you must not think hardly of me, for I like you very much; and it grieves me to feel that I have made you think—that—"

"I do not blame you, Miss Ellis," interrupted Charles Stanfield. "Perhaps I should rather blame myself for having been so hasty; but I could not help it. I felt that I must come down to see you once more—and ask you if—" and here Charles Stanfield paused, and half turned away.

In Diana's pity for her companion, her own courage rose and she went on with her interrupted speech.

"I have never been away from Broadmead, Mr. Stanfield, and I do not know what people do in the world; but it seemed so easy and pleasant to me to talk to you, and as if I almost had known you for years, through Captain Stanfield's being my godfather, that I did not think of anything else."

Charles Stanfield turned suddenly round, and, taking her hand, asked earnestly:—

"Miss Ellis—Diana, could you not think of anything else? In time—perhaps a long time—but could it not bring me some hope?"

Diana did not withdraw her hand; but she looked up quietly and said:—

"I am engaged."

Charles Stanfield started—he half flung her hand away. Then village gossip was true for once. Why had he not had eyes to see? He might have known how hopeless his chance was—he might have been more ready to believe, though Dr. Crawford could not affirm it, the probability of her engagement after that evening at Miss Pyecroft's.

"I thought most people knew it," said Diana, in an apologetic tone—"not formally exactly, but that they supposed it."

"I presume I heard a slight mention of what you allude to," returned Charles Stanfield, a little coldly; "but I attached no importance to it."

"Of course not—how should he?" reasoned Diana within herself, all at once remembering Captain Stanfield's report of Linthorp. And she felt the more deeply to blame, because she seemed to see how Charles Stanfield must have been misled by the little interest she had outwardly evinced respecting John Carteret.

They had turned back across the long slopes, and were walking through the line of wood again. But neither spoke. They reached the spot where Diana had gathered the violets; and there Charles Stanfield stopped, and, holding them out to her, he said:—

"Perhaps you would rather I did not keep these, Miss Ellis?"

"They are not worth keeping, Mr. Stanfield," she answered. "I wish you would take something better from me and give me something in return."

He looked up inquiringly.

"Will you give me your friendship in exchange for mine? The fastest friends sometimes are those who begin with a little misunderstanding; and I cannot afford to lose you, for your father's sake."

Friendship sounded a cold word to Charles Stanfield, after what he had so fondly hoped to gain; and there was a little stiffness in his tone as he replied:—

"In any way that I can ever serve you, Miss Ellis, you may depend upon me."

"That will not do," said Diana. "I want more than that; that is but charity, scantily doled out."

"If is all I can promise at present," was the reply.

And again Diana reproached herself for her want of clear sightedness. Surely, with Signora Neri's warning sounding in her ears, she might have been wiser. It was too late now and she gave a sigh.

"Do not pity me, Miss Ellis," said Charles Stanfield. "I have not asked for that."

"I was not pitying you," said Diana, sorrowfully—"it was myself I was thinking of. It is so much easier to forgive others than one's self."

"What do you mean?" he asked, a little abruptly.

"I do not quite know. I seem to wish that I were you instead of myself. Yet, perhaps, that is selfish, for I feel very unhappy."

"You must not feel unhappy on my account," he said, more gently, for there was something soothing to him in her evident distress; and—in spite of the demolition of the fairy castle he had been building up—he felt none of the mortification that men usually feel in such cases, and which is, perhaps, oftentimes the sorest point in their disappointment.

"You have a bright future before you," he continued—"full of joy and happiness; and, when I get a little accustomed to its brightness, then the friendship time you speak of may come. I hope it will."

"It must—it will!" said Diana, warmly. "I can be satisfied with nothing else. I am not so rich in friends, Mr. Stanfield, that I can give up one."

"I think you need never want for friends, Miss Ellis. You appear to be surrounded by them."

Diana shook her head.

"One does not know; one cannot tell until one is in actual want of them."

"I trust that time will never come," said Charles Stanfield. "But, if it should, will you remember me?"

"I will."

Charles Stanfield was surprised to find himself talking so calmly after his fervent outburst; surprised to find that, though his hopes had been crushed, he did not feel annoyed or embarrassed. He had sought and grown wise in the last half hour. The world had opened out before him, and he had gained something that he should not lightly lose. Perhaps his first love had been, after all, something of a half sentiment, since he felt so strangely calm and quiet. And yet he knew it would be a great relief when he should get away from Broadmead.

They walked on until they came in sight of the gates of the Manor House.

"Good bye, Miss Ellis," he said. "I shall leave for town by the afternoon train."

Diana said good bye and hastened homeward, hoping to enter the house unobserved. But in the hall she met Jasper, who asked where Mr. Stanfield was.

"He is not coming," she answered—but her voice trembled so that Jasper, in some surprise, looked more keenly at her and perceived the tears rolling down her cheeks.

"Why what is the matter, Di?" he asked. But he received no answer, saving what her face revealed as she sprang past him and fled to her own room.

Jasper stood for a moment bewildered, as the truth dawned upon him and his heart sank within him—for what mischief might not be done if, in her answer, Diana should in any way have acknowledged her engagement to John Carteret? Why had he not foreseen the reason of Mr. Stanfield's unexpected re-appearance at Broadmead? Again he might be thrown back in the plans which he was endeavoring skilfully to restore to order.

Yet he need have been under no apprehension, so far as Charles Stanfield was concerned. For Mr. Stanfield, journeying up to London, was meditating upon Jasper Seaton as his successful rival.

CHAPTER XXXV.

DOUBTING.

John Carteret traveled down to Linthorp with Miss Pyecroft. He was a little abstracted; and when Miss Pyecroft came to observe him by daylight, she thought that he was looking paler than he did at Broadmead; also he looked careworn and anxious. She had been too much occupied and excited on the previous evening to pay much attention to him, or to give much heed to the questions which he asked her; indeed, on the whole, it appeared to her as though he did not take much interest in Broadmead affairs, and none at all in the Manor House people, since he had made no inquiries after the Seatons or Diana. To day he seemed still less inclined for conversation; and Miss Pyecroft, after mentally arranging the heads of a letter she proposed writing upon the meeting at Comminster, allowed her mind to stray back to the afternoon upon which she had taken chocolate at the Neris, and to set that down as the epoch at which any flirtation that might have existed between John Carteret and Diana began to descend from its culminating point, ending—as such youthful follies generally do—in nothing; whilst Diana's more sober manner of late she attributed to the influence of her probable engagement to a man some ten or twelve years older than herself. John Carteret's somewhat absent manner she connected with the rumors she had heard of his attentions to Miss Wardlaw. "And doubtless," she concluded, "he does not feel himself in a position to make an offer, and fears lest some one else may step in. Very natural. I must keep my eyes open, and do what I can for Mr. Carteret—he's a deserving young man, and has certainly been very civil to me. I must bear him preach, and see if he is sound in his views. It would have made a poor wife for a clergyman. I am glad it is all as it is." Such were the reflections which Miss Pyecroft allowed to settle into convictions in her mind; and then she closed her eyes, and soon began to nod gently—for her slumbers had been but short, she having talked far into the night, or rather into the morning, with her friend, and had risen early in order to catch the train for Linthorp by which John Carteret was returning.

John Carteret's thoughts were in a more perturbed state than those of Miss Pyecroft. Perhaps he ought to have had sufficient faith in Diana to keep all doubts away; but then he had two arguments to combat against—the one, his own knowledge of the high esteem in which Diana held Jasper Seaton; the other, the warning that Mrs. Seaton had given him. And to back these two arguments came Miss Pyecroft's later testimony—and Miss Pyecroft had always a good idea of what was going on in Broadmead and of the views that were current there. And John Carteret could not but feel that there was danger of Diana being unconsciously drawn nearer and nearer to one whom she was so constantly with. And, like Miss Pyecroft, he closed his eyes; but the future that now played out its drama before him was not so unclouded as the future he had seen shadowed forth ere the sober realities of life had clawed upon him; and again he asked himself, as he had more than once done before—had he done right? Diana had seen so little of the world.

In due time Linthorp was reached; Miss Pyecroft and her packages were duly deposited at Belvidere terrace, and John Carteret was seated in his little room overlooking the quay.

"One hundred and twenty a year, and no further prospect for sometime," quoth John Carteret to himself, taking at the same time a survey of his apartment—a low, long, comfortable room, with two narrow windows, well dusted brown moreen curtains and well-rubbed furniture—too old fashioned to be in accordance with modern requirements, and yet not old fashioned enough to have an appearance of antiquity about them. The general air of the room might be said to be highly respectable, but that was its highest praise; and respectability, one knows, often carries an atmosphere of stiffness and thriftiness with it that does not savor of the luxurious or the artistic. Lodgings! And her rooms were so beautiful! And John Carteret paused in his moralizing, and took a flying inventory of Madame de Mouline's renovated apartments.

Then he continued his meditations. The room was a room in which a man pursuing a dull life, and seeking higher aims than worldly prosperity, might be content, even thankful. But then, one is thankful for much in this life that has neither beauty nor luxury about it. If he were going to be alone it would be well enough.

And he drew his chair close up to the fire and put his feet upon the fender. It was the time, the place, the attitude for a reverie. The world was gathering close, so that no one who had not urgent business to attend to would think of stirring abroad; the tide was coming in with a low, moaning murmur, dull and heavy—for there was no wind to stir it into boisterous activity.

And John Carteret's thoughts resolved themselves into something like the following propositions:—

"Ought a poor man to marry? Most curates are poor. Ministers of all denominations are taken them in the aggregate, poor. Carlyle says, 'work, work!' In the ministry, a man may work forever and get no proportionate pay. In fact, the hardest workers are often those with the smallest salaries. The ministry is not a paying profession. Is it right that ministers should be thus poor? Ought they not to be guaranteed above the sordid cares of life, since their occupations are reputed the most valuable in the world? Is it possible for a man to do his duty as a spiritual teacher if he is overwhelmed by temporal troubles? The world condemns him if he strives after the loaves and fishes—yet if he so much to blame? If everything on earth goes wrong, does it necessarily fit him for heaven?"

Then he tacked round on the other side of the argument. "Perhaps those who have the most to bear preach the best, because they preach with the experience of half their congregations. Perhaps those who have the greatest lack of earthly treasure understand best the lesson of the widow's mite, since all they give is given of their poverty, with self denial, whilst the rich man stints himself of no necessary, nor even luxury, to enable him to give liberally and handsomely. Perhaps the poor man is nighest heaven because he has the fewest inducements to chain his soul to earth."

"For and against," quoth John Carteret. "I have chosen the path, and must take it with the 'for.' What says the Word? 'He that loveth his life for my sake shall find it.' Find it—where? Not on the earth. Higher—higher—whither he must tread the lives of those around. Diana!"

And then came to him the memory of Diana's words, and her striving, struggling, fluttering to spread her soul's wings and mount upward.

"What must he do? Should he unclasp his hold, and let the dove find refuge in another nest, more suited to her bringing up? Why should he transplant her to a harder soil, where she might faint and languish through keeping her faith to him? And yet, if her life had been in a measure committed to his keeping, was he not accountable for it? Through him had the awakening come; might it not be his to strengthen it—to keep it alive? Love, duty, right, wrong—how was he to discern between them? how was he to know which was the best? Anything for her sake, at whatever cost it might be to himself, he was willing to do."

Before John Carteret entered on his work he scarcely understood how hopeless was the prospect before him. With little chance of preferment in the church, he should probably remain for years in his present position; and the hope that had lighted up the future, as he had at first regarded it, was dying away, and had not sufficient power to annihilate its darkness now, or even to disperse the gloom that Miss Pyecroft's communings had cast around him.

He opened his desk and took from it Diana's last letter. It was but a short one, and Jasper's name did not occur in it. He read it over several times, until he thought he observed in it an interest about it. Diana had been in the habit of telling him all that Jasper had done for her, and of how his lameness was progressing; and suddenly, in this letter, she had ceased to speak of him, and evidently avoided the subject.

And so John Carteret's musings brought him no satisfaction; but yet he did not cease to muse, and ingeniously—as is the wont of lovers—invented a thousand tortures for himself which he was not able to alleviate.

Nay, but so John Carteret should have been stronger—should have cast aside all fears, and have thrown doubt to the winds. Yet stronger men than he, and older ones, with more worldly wisdom, have in their day had vacillations.

"There's a sailor's wife come to ask if you will go and see her husband, sir," said the landlady, entering the room after a preliminary knock. "She's pinched with cold and looks half-starved."

John Carteret started up.

"The poor ye have always"—the words sounded in his ears.

There was work for him—a path that he need not doubt about; and he went forth into the misty evening.

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

COL. JAMES FISK, JR.

This gentleman was born in Pownal, Vermont, on April 1st, 1835. He received a common school education, and at about the age of sixteen commenced his battle with the world. When but eighteen years of age he was engaging in selling Yankee notions from town to town through the New England states, driving a two horse wagon, which conveyed his merchandise. Some years later he entered the store of Jordan, Marsh & Co., extensive dry goods dealers, in Boston, Mass., as a clerk, where his energy and probity raised him rapidly to a high position in that house. Finding the commercial and financial field of Boston too limited to gratify his ambition, he came to New York and in a very short time after his arrival made his presence felt by a bold financial stroke in Wall street, which transferred a large sum of money to his credit. He then commenced extending his operations in various directions, being elected a director of the Erie railroad. In 1853 he purchased the Stonington line of steamboats running from this port to Boston. These he caused to be refitted in a sumptuous manner, and the line, under his supervision, became one of the most popular routes of travel between the two cities. In 1865 he became the manager of the Bristol line of steamboats running between the above named ports. These boats might not inaptly be termed floating palaces, as they were fitted up with every concomitant for the traveler's comfort that money could procure. Full bands of music accompanied the passengers upon each trip, and all the officers of the boats were clad in a handsome uniform, somewhat resembling those worn by officers of our navy. Near the hour of the departure of the steamers from this city Mr. Fisk might be seen in a conspicuous position wearing a gorgeous uniform, and centreing upon himself the eyes of the spectators there assembled. The press of this city commenced to ridicule him, and he gained what he craved—notoriety. But with keen foresight this prominence was turned to good account. The line of boats, so splendidly advertised, became the popular route of travel, and was so crowded that applications for state rooms had to be made days in advance of the date of sailing, to secure them. All this time he was hard at work advancing the interests of the Erie Railroad, of which, about the year 1867, he was elected the comptroller.

In the year 1868 he purchased from Mr. S. N. Pike the opera house at the corner of 23d street and 8th avenue, which he re-christened the Grand Opera House. This building was immediately transferred by Mr. Fisk, Jr., to the Erie Railroad Company, and the front part of that edifice Mr. Fisk, Jr. caused to be fitted up for the offices of that company, in a style of magnificence never before equalled in this country. At the time of the purchase E. L. Bateman's Opera Bouffe Company was performing there, and later in the season Mr. Fisk, Jr. purchased of Mr. Bateman all his interest in that troupe. During the same year he built a theatre in 24th street near the Fifth Avenue Hotel, for John Brougham, which is now known as the Fifth Avenue Theatre and of which he is still proprietor. In September of 1869, he was one of the principal movers in the famous gold "corner" which so terribly convulsed the financial circles of Wall street. About this time, for the purpose of relaxation and at the same time gratifying his passion for notoriety, he joined the Ninth Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., and was elected its colonel. By a generous use of money and by exciting a spirit of rivalry among the various companies of this regiment and encouraging enlistments, he at once raised it to prominence. During the past year he organized a band of one hundred musicians for this regiment, which also gave concerts at the Grand Opera House on Sunday evenings, and in order to secure the services of Mr. J. Levy, the distinguished performer on the cornet-a-piston, to this band, he engaged him at exclusive services for one year, agreeing to pay him therefor the munificent sum of $10,000. This regiment is now in Boston upon an excursion, and some considerable excitement has been created through the public press on account of the opposition of the authorities of the cities of Boston and Charlestown to the regiment making a parade there on Sunday. The opera bouffe company which performed at the Grand Opera House during the past winter is now making a tour of the western cities, under Mr. Fisk's supervision and proprietorship. It is with regret that we learn that he is to retire from the management of the Grand Opera House at the termination of the present engagement of the pantomime company now playing there, for Mr. Fisk is a representative American, a self-made man, self-reliant, persevering and honorable, and although passionately fond of notoriety, he generally manages to turn it to good account. It must be conceded that he is a benefactor of mankind, for, handling, as he does, a vast amount of money, the poorer classes are directly and indirectly benefited thereby. There are few theatrical managers who would have undertaken so boldly as he has, and expended such a large amount of capital in securing and producing attractions. He has given employment to a large number of people, with all of whom his dealings have been characterized by strict integrity, and it is therefore to be hoped that he will reconsider his intention of resigning the management of the Grand Opera House.

A FIERY FEMALE.—An indignant person of the female persuasion sends the following epistle for publication in the Alabama State Journal:—"If I was the Fireman's I would not Turnout until they at least treated like people. the day they all turned out I was ashamed of them If I was them I would give them theirs. Engine and hose and let them work their flies to them selves; and have nothing to do with them. If I was a Fireman I would be ashamed of it I would not marry a fireman upon no terms. for he would make me ashamed of him: have a Fireman no fever; The ladies would die before they would take it have Firemen no never, If I was a fireman's wife I would stand more on my own Indignity than to be walked on by a man like my self. I would not Stand it no never. Marry a fireman no never. I will now bid you fare well, my firemens, it is the morning star I will now retire."

INTERLOCUTOR.—Mr. Bones, I was just going to ask you something, but I'll postpone the question, for here comes Brother Cusick, with his banjo over his shoulder and the strings all broken, and he looks as if he'd been having a row with somebody.

[Enter Sam Cusick, dejectedly.]

INT.—How now, Brother Cusick? You seemed plunged in melancholy.

CUSICK.—Dat 'what you call it? I bin plunged into a pile o' stocked Nose—dat's what's de matter! Got into de fust railroad car I cum across to come ober to de hall, but de 'ductor didn't 'preciate music, so he ducked me in de lime puddle, an' I made a hoss collar ober de head of a man, wid my banjo, trying to git out.

INT.—Indeed. That must have provoked your choler, and I don't wonder you showed horse-tility.

CUSICK.—You bet it did! Tore off de only collar I had, and de shirt near cum wid it. But I got even.

INT.—You got even?

CUSICK.—I did dat. I went into de dry goods store dat de lime belong to, I was so mad, and sitting down on de sof'is——

INT.—The sofa, you mean, sir.

CUSICK.—Well, de so-far; I ax for de boss, and says I, right amongst all de ladies, says I:—"Bosey, don't you want to get a genius' clerk here, bosey? I'll come cheap." "Then you're just the feller I don't want," says he. "It 'd take half my stock to refit you." And I went out, leaving a broad streak of whitewash behind me. If he did reject me, it couldn't a bin on de 'count of my color.

INT.—That was evident. Well, sir, what did you do next?

CUSICK.—I went ober to de offis ob de Mornin' Hoorum, to state de facts ob de case and demand satisfaction.

INT.—Ah! That does credit to your judgment. Of course, they redressed you?

CUSICK.—Guess not—got de same clothes on yet. Dey was mitey cibbil, and said a good deal about de negro an' all dat, an' drew up a "card" for me to publish, an' charged me ten dollars for it, an' I hadn't it, and dat's de reason I guess dat it didn't go in.

INT.—You was pretty well cas'd already, I should imagine.

CUSICK.—Yes, bosey, but I didn' car' for dat. I wanted to git damages, and dat's what I tole de clerk. An' he says, says he, "I'll gub you damages;" and wid dat he roll me down de steps ob de press room, an' de pressman dipped me in de ink troff, and de boys left, and I crawled out like a fly out ob a molasses jug. And dey said "Shoo fly!" when I disappeared roun' de corner.

INT.—Having inked you I should have struck you off—taken an impression.

CUSICK.—Same ting; dey struck my name off deir proscription list, and jus' den when I was gwine roun' de corner to go home, a ashman hove his ash barrel, and I got de whole table o' contents all over; an' de ashes stuck to de ink, and de ink stuck to de mortar, and de mortar stuck to my clothes, an' I reiled out:—"Let me be!" and came over h'yar to take up a prescription.

INT.—Well, Cusick, give us a jig and we'll see what can be done for you; and then Juniper Brignoli will sing us his latest song about

THE GOOD OLD NEW YORK GENTLEMAN.

Come listen, friends and neighbors, while a story I relate,
Of a hale and hearty gentleman well known in every state;
A man of weight and influence among the rich and great,
Who owns within Manhattan's bounds a flourishing estate—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time.

He was the special favorite of all, I've heard it said,
Who lived within his range, and on all sides his favors shed;
And stocks would rise and stocks would fall whene'er he'd shake his head,
While his frown there lurked a spell made thousands quake with dread.
And yet was so awfully fraternal and condescending to those who'd nary red,
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time!

He loved good living, and could drink of lager beer a tun,
And meet him when you would, 'tis said, was running o'er with fun.
And oft upon the stump his eloquence our ears would stun,
Until the light waxed fierce and hot, and, by the exercise of his peculiar powers of persuasion, he had compelled his enemies to run—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time!

He knew the winning cards by heart, and when in a tight place
Could save himself and fill his purse by coppering on the ace;
He knew the winning horses, too, and won at every race,
And wasn't in the least afraid a pistol's mouth to face.
And if anybody thought of arresting him for any of his little peccadilloes the probability is that before they caught him they'd have a most exciting chase—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time.

He owned a railroad in himself and ate a silver spoon,
And 'mid the tipplest of the fun on evenings used to shine,
Besides a few score lots or so on the city's boundary line,
And if he hadn't sold them he'd have had them still, and his elegant establishment, and his dogs and his horses and his troops of friends, and a great many other things too numerous to mention, I opine—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time!

But every dog must have his day, and so it chanced at last
This good old soul, whose only fault was that he lived too fast,
Himself was forced to feel the blight of stern misfortune's blast;
He rallied, but alas! for him the fatal die was cast.
He gave up his wines and his hounds and his horses, his little parties, his excursions, his yachts and his youthful frivolities and into oblivion passed—
This natty New York gentleman, all of the modern time!

MR. KEARNES OF THE MANAGERS.
The tragedy of
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Originally written and composed by the celebrated Dan Hyes, of Limerick, and inserted in Shakespeare's works.

Hamlet, by Mr. Kearnes, being his first appearance in that character, and who, between the acts, will perform several solos on the patent bag-pipes, which play two octaves at the same time.
Ophelia, by Mrs. Prior, who will introduce several favorite airs in character, particularly "The Lass of Richmond Hill" and "We'll be Unhappy Together," from the Rev. Mr. Dibden's oddities.
The ghost of the Royal Queen, by direction of the Rev. Father O'Callagan, will be omitted, as too immoral for any stage.
Polonius, the comical politician, by a young gentleman, being his first appearance in public.
The Ghost, the Grave-digger and Laertes by Mr. Sampson, the great London Comedian.
The characters to be dressed in Roman shapes.
To which will be added a Farce, in 2 acts, called RAISING THE WIND.

Corner of Centre and Leonard streets,
Box 3,502 New York P. O.

NOTICE.

☞ CORRESPONDENTS, advertisers, and all others writing in relation to matters connected with this or any other department of the CLIPPER, are respectfully requested to address their favors to the editor and proprietor, and thereby avoid omissions, mistakes and confusion which are likely to occur when such communications are addressed to our assistants.

NOTICE.

ADVERTISERS must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

To Correspondents.

A READER.—1. In 1870 there were 37 theatres and 26 music halls open in London, Eng., besides several other places of amusement, say at least ten in number, while in New York the past season there were only 9 theatres, 3 minstrel halls and 3 variety halls, open. 2. With regard to Paris, at present it is hard to say how many places of amusement are left; but before the war there were many more than in New York—probably three or four times the number.

NEWARK.—According to the mutual agreement the game was to close at 5.30 P. M. At that hour the game was called. The score being incomplete, and the side at the bat being behind hand in the score, the umpire properly decided the game by the score of the last even innings played. Had the Amateurs been ahead in their incompleted innings, the score of the game would of then have been decided by the result of the incompleted innings.

J. A. PLUMER.—It is doubtful if any thing will cure the dog if the disease is of long standing. Change his food, prohibiting flesh: if he is old or very weak, beef gravy may be added to the rice or biscuit, on which he must be fed. Give the following:—Barbadoes tar, 2 drams; powdered squills, 3 drams; extract of belladonna, 2 scruples; liquorice powder, sufficient to make a mass, divide into 20 pills and give four daily.

FRIENDS.—Your quotation is probably incorrect. The following occurs in "Macbeth." Act 1, scene 6, and is spoken by Lady Macbeth to King Duncan:—

"——For those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits."

DRAMA.—A printed copy of the title of the play and fifty cents must be sent to the "Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C.," to secure copyright matter, which will go free of postage. If you publish the play, two copies must be mailed to the same address when the publication. Mechanical effects must be patented.

J. L. M.—Flora Temple, previous to her purchase by Mr. W. McDonald, was owned at various times by Messrs. J. D. McMann, J. C. Perrin, G. Perrin, Jas. Irving, and one or two others. In the mid-summer days in England, 13 miles an hour was the regular rate of travel, including stoppages.

LOUIS, Brooklyn.—Mr. Bonner never made any offer of the kind. In the controversy which occurred between that gentleman and Commodore Vanderbilt, in 1867, the former proposed to trot Mountain Boy against Dexter and give the entrance money to some charitable institution designated by Mr. Bonner, but the latter declined to trot.

BALTIMORE, Md.—Hannah did not fight Morrissey subsequent to their battle at Long Point, Canada. The fights to which we alluded as having in reality been won by John were those with Sayers and King. 2. We cannot take time to hunt up information to satisfy idle curiosity.

W. R. C.—Geo. Rooke fought Tim Hussey (twice), Charley Collins and Matt Moore. Patsy Sheppard fought Atkinson, Mills, Jones, Riordan, Coburn and Murphy. Jerry Noon fought Young Greek, Gray, Hazeltine (twice), Massey, Lane, Green and Bill Barry.

RACINE, Wis.—Tom Allen and Mike McCoole were opponents in the ring once only. They were matched a second time, but in consequence of a failure to agree upon a final stakeholder, the match fell through.

CONSTANT READER, Eastport.—If it was distinctly stated that the bet was to be governed by the referee's decision, without regard to the rules, the referee's decision must be upheld. If not, it is a draw, as the fight was not resumed before the following Sunday.

C. E. C.—Advise your friend to go to a first-class physician at once. To prescribe without examining the patient is folly; and to take patent medicines without knowing the cause of ailment is ridiculous.

J. B. Pittsburgh, Pa.—A true sporting man's word should be considered as good as his bond, and therefore, as the bet was positively made, the loser should pay up without any such mean, despicable, empty excuses.

COOLEY.—Write to John Taylor, Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, and he will give you the desired information. He has not shot a match with a party of the name mentioned within six years, but he may have shot against him in a sweepstakes.

F. F. S.—Shortstop's special duty is to cover second base, but he must cover third, and pitcher also. In the latter he should cover every body in the field, in order to play the position "up to the handle." Let him play it *Force*bly and he will be all Wright.

HOWARD, P., Danbury, Ct.—Have nothing to do with them. Dr. Taylor, of 56 Amity street, might be consulted with advantage. At all events enquire at a regular physician.

W. S. W.—The correct quotation is "since brevity is the soul of wit," and it occurs in a speech of Polonius in "Hamlet," in act II, scene II.

KENILWORTH, Akron, O.—It will cost $50. A full description of the building can accompany it. You should have given the opening bill and full cast.

O. AND W., Jersey City.—At cribbage, when the cards are played in the following order—3, 8, 2, 4, 5, 3, 4, 5, the player of the last tray is not entitled to a sequence.

READER, Phila.—Lady Thorn's best time for three consecutive heats was 2:19¼, 2:20¼, 2:20½; total 7:00. American Girl, 2:21½, 2:19, 2:20¾; total 7:02.

RAZOR, Cincinnati.—D cannot take advantage of his own wrong doing, by not following suit or trumping, and must play the ten of diamonds.

PUPIL, Louisville.—Wagner, who ran the great match against Gray Eagle in 1839, has been dead some years; he was five years old at that time.

COLUMBIA.—When Dexter made his 2:17¼ at Buffalo, he went against the same time. Neither Gen. Butler nor Rolla Goldcust were entered against him.

JOS. SOUTH, Boston.—As the men fought before the next Sunday after the day originally fixed the bet holds good, and the man who bet that the battle would last as long as his antagonist won the money.

JAS. R., Chicago, Ill.—1. The best mile running time, level ground, by a pedestrian, is 4:17¾. 2. The fastest time on record in which the horse has been ridden a mile was 1:43, seconds.

O. R. K., Pittsfield.—The party refusing to play, forfeited the game, 9 to 0. No game being played—five innings not being finished—bets are off.

AMERICAN HAIR NOTE COMPANY.—The Mutuals having scored in their first innings, the party betting that they would, wins. It was simply a bet on the first innings play.

J. A. C., Honesdale, Pa.—1. The longest standing jump on record is 24 feet 4 inches, by Ed. Searles. 2. The measurement is from toe to heel. 3. Yes.

LYE, London, Eng.—1. Remit us £1 3s., which will pay for one year's subscription and postage. Coburn's stands 5 ft. 9 in., and Hazeltine's 5 ft. 8. Thank you for the Derby list.

FISHMAN, Nashville.—The best throw of which we have any record, by a steam engine, is 208 feet, at Cincinnati, O. Don't know the name of the engine.

SWEET GUM, Pascagoula, Miss.—1. No. 2. He was born at Birmingham, Eng., but we do not know whether his parents were English or Irish. 3. Your subscription expires with No. 17, Vol. 19.

F. W. W.—The fastest mile in 1870 was run by Wyatt, Holland in 3 minutes and 42 seconds, by Boyd, who now resides at Washington.

J. W., Melbourne, Australia.—Yours of date April 20th is the first we have received from you. We shall be pleased to receive a summary of Australian news whenever you may feel disposed to send.

MRS. E. N. S., Faribault, Minn.—We have not their present whereabouts. A letter addressed to them in the care of this office, will probably reach them, or which our circus summary.

G. H. J., Storm Lake, Ia.—1. The fastest mile time in America is 1:43. There is no official time record in England. 2. There is no authentic record of England time.

G. J. H.—Mr Charles Wheatley is the secretary of the American Jockey Club. His address is Madison Avenue Hotel, 27th street and Madison avenue, New York.

AMATEUR, Fish River.—If you take the favorite in a race the field is what starts against you.

H. T. L., Sedalia, Mo.—Brief items will be acceptable. Give route ahead as far as possible.

FRANK, Springfield, Ill.—We have received no notification to that effect.

KING.—1. West Point. 2. For time question, take a trip, with note book in hand.

J. W. N.—In the Derby of 1869 Pretender was first, Pero Gomez second, The Drummer third and Ryshworth fourth.

G. G. C., Richmond.—Dexter's 2:17¼ is the fastest trotting time on record.

INDIANAPOLIS.—It is not considered policy to breed game fowls so closely as from brother and sister, son and mother.

J. S., Richmond, Va.—The player, knowing the limit of the game to be $25, is only entitled to the amount.

HALL TOSSERS.—Call on Weed and Decker, for the Capitoline, at the grounds.

D. D., Guelph.—The CLIPPER goes to press Monday night and is issued Tuesday mornings.

A., Mt. Gilead.—The White Stockings defeated the Resolutes by 17 to 4. They did not play Yale.

J. C. G., Cambridge.—The parties betting on the Olympics in the game of May 27th, won.

F. W. SHRAVER.—Yes, twice over in Brooklyn, and once in Chicago, in 1870.

D. WILEY.—1. No, they fought at Spy Pond. 2. Yes; the meeting in Canada was a fight.

BURT.—As the fight was not resumed before the Sunday following the 11th of May, the bet is a draw.

SAM'L, Lincoln, Ill.—Heenan and Sayers fought April 17th, 1860. We never answer questions by mail.

J. H. C., Catskill.—At cribbage the ace counts with the deuce and not with the king, in a sequence.

C. L. S., Swann B. B. C., Baltimore.—No other reason than that it was not received that we know of.

HOODLUM, San Francisco.—As no name was signed to the article, we cannot publish it.

J. P. H., Worcester, Mass.—Philadelphia is the next largest city to New York in the United States.

J. W. R., Holden, Mo.—A went out first, because he was not set back, and the point for set is always to be taken.

SPORT, New Orleans.—Thank you. It would be locally interesting no doubt, but we cannot spare so much space.

BALTIMORE.—There is no legal remedy for the recovery of the money you won at bluff. It is a debt of honor.

J. KELLY.—You must pay forfeit. Mr. Rogers' half interest in the horse he named was sufficient ownership to entitle him to the money.

MAC.—We do not keep track of his daily movements; therefore can't say. Ask him yourself.

BELL, San Francisco.—Your question admits of no precise calculation, and is, therefore, unanswerable.

F. C., Frankfort, Ky.—We have no record of an eight mile running race in Ireland or elsewhere.

J. F., Philadelphia, Pa.—The laws of Massachusetts require that all voters shall be able to read and write, which is constitutional.

J. B., Oswego, N. Y.—Miss Ellie Henderson can be addressed at Long Branch, N. J. Your letter came too late for use.

SUBSCRIBER, Nashua, N. H.—We have never been apprised of the fate of the man who murdered William Lent, the circus manager.

HARRY, Independence, Kansas.—There is no official time taken in England.

FOP.—The other players have no voice in the matter. It rests solely between the dealer and beggar.

EPHRAIM KNOX.—We will publish your sketch as soon as space permits.

FAR WEST, La Porte City.—A loses the bet, for sixes are the highest denomination at poker dice.

M. S., Boston.—Aces are the lowest denomination that can be thrown at poker dice, and sixes the highest.

TOM.—The poem is below our style standard, and the news item is nearly a month old; both are, therefore, omitted "for cause."

T. E. O'S., Savannah.—We have more correspondence than we can find room for, and must decline your proposition.

C. H. H., Watertown, N. Y.—The "Warning" will be given at an early day.

DAVIS & CO.—You will have seen the disclaimer ere this. Thanks for your offer.

J. K. P., Boston, Mass.—A new deal by the same dealer was in order.

C. C. L., Danville, Pa.—Thank you for the old bill; it will add greatly to the interest of our next variety department.

J. W. B., Chicago.—It is rather out of date now, the public having lost all interest in the affair.

GONSALVO, Memphis, Tenn.—We have none left, and you will find it difficult to find them.

W. L.—Would'nt pay expenses. Send extracts by mail promptly.

LA PETITE JENNIE.—One dollar and five cents for each insertion.

T. H., Holden, Mo.—The highest takes the deal, and ace is high.

E. W. D., Chester, N. Y.—See answer to another correspondent.

ROBT. J. M.—He may serve as many terms as he is elected for.

H. H. MCG., Dallas.—Herzog ran a mile at Cincinnati in 1:43¾.

H. H. A., Denver, Col.—Thanks for items. Always acceptable.

SALT TOSSER.—It is no game unless five innings are completed.

H., Cincinnati, O.—607 Callowhill street, Philadelphia, Pa.

E. S. S.—It is right. Low does not take the deal at euchre.

PALMETTO, Ga.—The answer was to a query at poker dice.

KINGSTON, Leavenworth, Kansas.—Fifteen cents per line.

J. F. S., Springfield, Mass.—We do, in the winter season.

G. H. S., Jr.—Yes, he must return and touch the base again.

REGULAR.—The bet is a draw. See answers elsewhere.

C. F. F., Boston.—We are not in that line of business.

C. F., Toledo, O.—Order it through a news agency.

CHICAGO.—No game having been played, the bet is off.

ARNOLD.—A wins on the first bat but loses the second.

A. J. E.—He was regular in at least most of the nine.

DRY GOODS.—He never had anything to do with it.

H. H. S.—Yes, he must return and touch the base again.

G. M. & S. Y.—For three insertions, $2 70.

FRANK B.—See Ed. James' advertisement.

NICHOLAS DE A.—We have no record.

CHICAGO READER, St. Louis.—No.

B. DOMBEST.—Accepted.

M. C., Evansville.—Yes.

HAMILTON.—No.

THE DIFFERENCE.—Whittier's genius, it is said, was kindled by reading Burns. Au contraire, as we say in the classics, "Our Jim's" genius was started by fooling Burns.

THE THEATRICAL CAMPAIGN OF 1871-2.—From preparations already made, and negotiations pending, it is fair to presume that the theatrical season of 1871-2 will be very animated and that competition will be extremely strong. Managers, agents and performers are already securing the European market for fresh talent, and whatever is good on the other side will be duly translated to this, for money is no object with our managers when they desire to secure any great novelty. We hear of many new plays being written for the home market by authors of foreign as well as of domestic repute, and, as sensation gives promise of having a continued run, we may look for some very absorbing plots and some very astonishing scenic effects, for no sensation is worth much, now-a-days, unless it hurls a man over an abyss, crushes him on a railroad, burns him to cinders in a fiery furnace, or otherwise dispatches him for his villainy. Dramatic agents here and elsewhere have just about as much as they can attend to in making up companies for next season's business, for the time is now at hand when engagements are made and contracts "signed, sealed and delivered." New York will soon be overrun with professionals, for it is here that managers and performers meet and exchange the compliments of the season while looking up chances for the good time coming. As we before remarked, coming events cast their shadows before, and by those shadows we feel convinced that the substance is a live body, and that a live season will attend the labors of our friends in the campaign of 1871-2.

THE SPORTING SEASON opens uncommonly rich, some most noteworthy events having already been decided on the race track, the ball ground, and the waste of waters, and, what is better, they seem to have given more general satisfaction than in former seasons. It only needs fair, legitimate sport to attract the people; and when it is known that the events to come are of a trustworthy, reliable character, there will always be a large attendance to enjoy the exhibitions, be they racing, trotting, base ball, yachting, billiards, rowing, or anything else in that line. Interest in outdoor pastimes is fast increasing in this country, for the people are beginning to notice the important fact that "all work and no play makes John a dull boy," indeed. Official reports of all the important sporting events of the day will be found duly recorded in each issue of the NEW YORK CLIPPER.

THEY NEED A REVIVAL in Boston and Charlestown, Massachusetts, for they are sadly deficient in piety in that region. Col. Jas. Fisk, Jr., desiring to visit those places, with the Ninth Regiment, sought permission to hold religious services on the Boston Common, or on the grounds of Bunker Hill Monument, but the irreligious authorities denied them the privilege, and thereby gave a serious blow to the cause of religion. To say the least of it, it is a rather un-Common proceeding, but the glorious Ninth can afford to be magnanimous, and attribute the questionable action of the Hubbers to their spiritual deficiencies.

COL. JAMES FISK, JR.—On the first page of this issue of the CLIPPER is published the portrait and biography of this prominent self-made man, who, by energy, perseverance and business sagacity, has achieved a position in the mercantile world that he "or any other man" might well feel proud of, and we heartily congratulate him on his success.

PUGILISM IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—A resolution has been passed in the lower branch of the Territorial Legislature, directing the Superintendent of Police to prevent any exhibition of the art of boxing and pugilism in the District of Columbia. This will have a tendency to interfere with the fistic operations of our representatives in Congress.

QUESTION FOR A DEBATING SOCIETY:—Whether the religion of the present day is conducive to piety?

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Weekly Record of the Decease of Prominent Individuals.

COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BONNI, ——.—An Italian gentleman, who rendered great service to the French during the war of the invasion and the civil war on the battle field as a member of the American ambulance—killed in the Rue de Rivoli on the third day of the Paris insurrection.

BOSANICK, Herr—Musical conductor. Particulars in foreign news department.

CONNOLLY, Dr. James J.—A native of Ireland, and well known physician of this city—killed himself and his two children while under the influence of liquor—N.Y. city, June 18th, aged about 40.

CROSWELL, Edwin—Once an influential journalist and politician of this state; a nephew of the Rev. Harry Croswell, the famous Federalist, died in Albany, May 29th, 1871, in receiving school, he became assistant editor of The Catskill Recorder, a paper founded by a member of his family in 1790; subsequently receiving its entire control and management. In 1814 he went to Albany to assume the editorial control of The Albany Gus, also to act as state printer, and for thirty years was a resident of the state capital. In 1840 the whigs carried the state, and he lost the office of state printer, which he had held for sixteen years. Four years later he obtained the position again and held it for three years. In 1854, after an editorial career of forty years, he retired from journalism—Princeton, N. J., June 18th, aged 87.

COPPOCK, Sir Joseph—Alderman of the City of London—London, Eng., June 3d, aged 56.

COOK, Frank E.—Well known in connection with the Department at Washington, as son of Captain Cook, of the U. S. Treasury Department, and formerly editor of the Danville, Pa., Democrat—Washington, D. C., June 9th, aged 27.

CUNNINGHAM, A. F.—An ex-clerk of the Treasury Department and one of the oldest residents of Washington. In 1834 he was the publisher in Washington of the organ designed to further the claims of Judge White to the Presidency—Washington, D. C., June 16th, aged 71.

DIXON, Mrs.—Wife of ex-U. S. Senator James Dixon—Hartford, Conn., June 16th.

DAVIS, the Hon. Richard D.—Of Waterford, a native of this state and a graduate of Yale College of the Class of 1818. He was a representative in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Congress from this District from 1841 to 1845—found dead in his own yard, Waterford, N. Y., June 17th.

FIGUEIREA, Consul—Born in 1824, eldest son of the late ambassador from Portugal to the United States, and himself for some years held the office of consul general of Portugal at this port—N. Y. city, June 18th, aged 47.

GAILLARD, Napoleon—The famous shoemaker and ex-orator at public meetings—France, recently.

GRAY, The Hon. George de—Youngest surviving son of Thomas, fourth Lord Walsingham—London, Eng., June 1st, aged 60.

GRANT, Alexander H.—Professor of Anatomy, and one of the professors of the Pennsylvania Medical College; a popular citizen of Philadelphia, and during the late war served as a volunteer in one of the Pennsylvania regiments—Philadelphia, Pa., June 18th, aged 47.

KRAUSE, The Hon. David—Of Norristown; appointed president judge of Norristown (seventh) judicial district; took his seat on the bench at Norristown, Feb. 27th, 1871; continued to preside over the courts of Bucks and Montgomery, until his election by the Whigs in 1851, when he surrendered the office, and on Jan. 9th, 1852, was admitted to practice as an attorney at the Montgomery bar. During the war of Pennsylvania, by the Confederates, he served as a private soldier in the Union army, and was the republican candidate for Congress, in 1862. The deceased was a native of Lebanon, Pa., and in early life was in partnership with Hon. Simon Cameron, in the publication of a democratic newspaper at Harrisburg—Norristown, Pa., June 13th, aged 71.

KNOWLTON, the Hon. J. S.—Sheriff of Worcester Co., Mass., editor of the Palladium. Born in Sharon, N. H., Dec. 11, 1791; graduated at Dartmouth, and subsequently edited a paper in Lowell. On settling in Worcester he started the Palladium, in 1834, and has edited it to the present time. He was the fourth mayor of the latter city, serving in 1853-4. In 1856 was elected sheriff of Worcester Co., a position he filled for fifteen years; was a member of the Constitutional Convention, and had served one or two terms in the Senate and of strangulated hernia, Worcester, Mass., June 11th, aged 72.

LIVINGSTON, Dr. J. W.—Many years U. S. Consul at La Union, in Central America, and long a resident there, along the coast of which he was well known and prominently known—Cherry Valley, N. Y., about June 9th.

MCMAHON, Col. John V. L.—Formerly one of Maryland's most eminent lawyers and whig politicians—Cumberland, Md., June 15th, aged 71.

MANNING, Capt. Lyman B.—A prominent citizen of Lowell, Mass., an officer in the Boston Custom House, and until recently commander of the Lowell Mechanic Phalanx. The deceased had been to a picnic at Willow Dale and was returning, when, driving down the hill leading to the ferry-boat the horse became frightened and ran down the steep embankment into the river. Capt. Manning, it is supposed, was caught in the carriage, so that he could not extricate himself, and was drowned in the Merrimac at the ferry in Tyngsboro, Mass., June 14th.

MELLIGAN, Col. James—An ex-Confederate officer and well known turfman. See particulars in turf column.

PYNCHON, Daniel—A direct descendant of William Pynchon, one of the founders of Springfield, and a popular resident of that city. Mauritius Pynchon entered his office, opened a letter, and after reading the same, went into a closet, took off his hat and vest and then shot himself with a pistol, from the effects of which he died—Springfield, Mass., June 13th, aged 50.

PORTER, the Hon. P. B.—At one time speaker of assembly, and holder at different times of public positions—Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 18th.

PITMAN, Charles W.—Sheriff of Schuylkill county, Pa., and representative of that district in Congress from 1849 to 1851—Pottsville, Pa., June 18th.

PETERSON, William—The owner and occupant of the house on Tenth street, Washington, to which President Lincoln was conveyed after his assassination and where he died—committed suicide, Washington, D. C., June 18th.

ROBINSON, Sue.—Actress. Further particulars in another column.

RANKIN, Capt. William—A veteran of the Mexican war, and formerly resident at Pittsburgh, Pa.—San Francisco, Cal., June 15th.

SEVERN, Andrew T.—An old resident of Philadelphia, and for many years connected with various newspapers in that city—committed suicide by hanging himself, Philadelphia, Pa., June 12th.

SOMES, Joseph—An ex-M. P., for Hull, and the oldest son and partner of J. F. Somes, the well-known ship owner of Blackwell—London, Eng., June 1st, aged 86.

STANNUS, Joseph—Connected with opera and concerts. See foreign news column.

SEVERNS, Andrew T.—A once prominent citizen of Philadelphia, committed suicide—Philadelphia, Pa., June 12th, aged 44.

TATNALL, Commodore Josiah—Formerly of the U. S. Navy; afterward an officer in the confederate service; was a native of Georgia, and entered the United States navy from that state about the year 1812. He became a captain in 1850, and commanded the East India squadron from 1856 to 1859. At the breaking out of the rebellion in 1861 he commanded the iron clad Merrimac, which was destroyed by fire on the 11th of May, 1862, near Norfolk, to prevent the Union forces from taking possession of her—Savannah, Ga., June 13th, aged 78.

VALLANDIGHAM, Clement L.—The deceased was born in New Lisbon, Columbia county, Ohio, and graduated at Jefferson College, and spent a few months in Maryland as a teacher. In 1840 he began the study of law, and in 1845 was admitted to the bar in Ohio; entered public life in 1845, being elected a member of the Ohio Legislature, and from 1847 to 1849 edited a democratic journal at Dayton. From state politics he, in 1856, when Buchanan was elected President, was sent to Washington as a member of the House of Representatives from his district, and served on the Standing Committee on Territories during the 35th and 36th Congress, and was re-elected to the 37th; in 1863 he was arrested by order of Gen. Burnside for sedition, utterances inside the Union lines by publicly expressing sympathy for those in arms against the government of the United States; was tried by court martial and sentenced to close confinement at Fort Warren during the continuance of the war. This sentence was changed by President Lincoln to one of transportation across the rebel lines. A few months after he made his escape by running the blockade and arrived at Bermuda. From Bermuda he proceeded to Canada and remained there until nearly the close of the war, when he returned to Ohio. During his absence he was nominated for governor of Ohio, was defeated, and in 1864 was made a delegate to the Chicago Convention. He was a member of the National Democratic Convention held July 4th, 1868, at Tammany Hall, this city, and since then has devoted himself to the practice of his profession; lost his life while engaged at Lebanon, O., in defending Mr. Bowers, charged with the murder of Myers at Bowersville, some weeks ago. On June 16th he and his associate counsel were discussing the case. Two revolvers were on the table, one loaded and the other not, and to demonstrate his theory that Myers might have shot himself, he took one of them, and, supposing it to be unloaded, placed it in his right hand pocket, drew it partly out, and cocked and snapped it. The weapon (his own) was discharged, the contents entering his abdomen at a point nearly corresponding with that in which Myers was shot—Lebanon, O., June 17th, aged 45.

THE QUEEN'S CUP.

CABLE DISPATCHES IN REFERENCE TO IT.

Our readers are aware that Commodore James Ashbury, of the Harwich Yacht Club, contemplates re-attempting this season that which he failed in last, viz.:—The recovery of the famous cup won by the yacht America in 1851, and known as the "Queen's Cup." We have already given publicity to a speech made by Mr. Ashbury in England, wherein he stated that it was his intention to return to our waters in his new yacht, the Livonia, and that a message would be with credentials on the representative of eight different yacht clubs, there would be a better prospect of success, by reason of his having so many more chances. This announcement created not a little surprise to the yachtmen on this side of the Atlantic, who remembered what Mr. Ashbury seemed to have overlooked—that six months' notice was required by the rules governing competitors for the trophy. He probably surmised that the New York Club would waive this condition, and by the subjoined telegraphic correspondence between him and the commodore of said club it will be observed that he was, to some extent, correct in so conjecturing, though not, we fancy, entirely so. Read the correspondence:—

To COMMODORE JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Jr., New York.—The question of your champion vessel being settled, I now propose giving the stipulated six months' notice. If the club waive this condition the Livonia will start for New York in September.

New York, May 26th, 1871. COMMODORE ASHBURY.

To COMMODORE ASHBURY, London.—Your despatch has just been received. Have been out of town. What do you mean by "if the club waives this condition?" Please answer at once.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Jr., Commodore New York Yacht Club.

London, May 31st, 1871.

To COMMODORE BENNETT, New York.—Six months' notice required. This condition waived, the Livonia would leave for September. ASHBURY.

New York, May 31st, 1871.

To COMMODORE ASHBURY, London.—Will call meeting of the club and telegraph you result. What month do you wish to race in?

BENNETT.

London, June 1st, 1871.

To COMMODORE BENNETT, New York.—Propose racing for the cup in October, as the Livonia will leave the first week in September. ASHBURY.

At a special meeting of the New York Yacht Club, held June 6th, 1871, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, a notice dated May 27th, from Mr. Ashbury, commodore of the Royal Harwich Yacht Club, has been duly received, stating his desire to sail for the America's Cup, and requesting that the required six months' notice be waived in this case for him; it is, therefore

Resolved, That the New York Yacht Club will cheerfully consent to waive the six months' notice for him as the representative of the Royal Harwich Yacht Club, and that the commodore of the New York Yacht Club be requested to answer the message from Mr. Ashbury by cable telegram, and that the secretary of the New York Yacht Club be requested to forward to Mr. Ashbury by mail a copy of that answer with a copy of the above resolution.

The following is the message of the commodore of the New York Yacht Club:—

NEW YORK, June 6th, 1871.

TO JAMES ASHBURY, Esq., Commodore Royal Harwich Yacht Club, London.—The New York Yacht Club consents to waive the six months' notice, and accepts your challenge to race for the America's Cup next October. Name day in October you desire to race and answer immediately. JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Jr.,

Commodore New York Yacht Club.

LONDON, June 16th, 1871.

To COMMODORE BENNETT, New York Yacht Club, New York.—The stipulated notice having been waived, the several clubs will shortly send you necessary certificates for the Livonia's matches some time in October.

From the latter dispatch it will be seen that he accepts the waiving of the six months' notice as applying to each and all of the eight races proposed, which was manifestly not the intention of the New York Club, who are not foolish enough to risk the loss of so valuable a trophy in such a way, where the chances of defeat through accident would be so great. Mr. Ashbury forgets, too, that no action can be taken regarding a challenge for a second race, nor, indeed, can any such challenge be entertained by the club until the first has been decided, the result of which may deprive them of the custody of the cup. It strikes us that Commodore Ashbury asks entirely too much in the way of concession, and is disposed to grant too little himself. A great deal has already been conceded by the custodians of the Queen's Cup, and it is not likely that more will be granted to a man who appears to so little appreciate such generosity. It is pretty safe to conclude that not more than one contest for the great prize will take place this year, therefore.

THE INTERNATIONAL FOUR-OARED RACE.—The supporters of the English crew concerned in the forthcoming four-oared match against the St. John, or Paris four, met lately at Mr. T. J. Pickett's, Newcastle, for the purpose of mooting the necessary business arrangements concerning their share of the match. It was agreed that R. Jewitt, of Dunston, should build the crew a new four, almost on the model of the Dunston, and that in case a loan of the Dunston could not be procured from Mr. R. Liddell, of Pittsburgh, who bought the boat after the Lachine match last September, that another new four should be ordered from Jewitt, to take the boats as a spare boat. The crew, consisting of J. Bright (bow), R. Chambers (No. 2), H. Kelley (No. 3), and J. Renforth (stroke), with J. Percy as "odd man," went into close training for the match on June 7th, and will, in all probability, leave England for New Brunswick about the second week in July. A private letter has been received by James Renforth, in which it is stated that the deposit of £250 forwarded by the English crew had been received by the Hon. Mr. Jones, the stakeholder in the important match. The St. John crew are also working regularly. The new boat built for them by Charley Elliott was launched at Carleton on the 12th inst., and the crew expressed themselves well pleased with her.

BOSTON FOURTH OF JULY REGATTA.—The programme for the annual rowing regatta on Charles river, Boston, on July 4th, is as follows:—First race, single scull wherries, distance two miles; first prize, $100; second prize, $50. Second, for Whitehall boats; distance, two miles; first prize, $75; second prize, $50. Third, for double-scull boats; distance two miles; first prize, $100; second prize, $50. Fourth, for four-oared working boats; rowed on the gunwale; distance two miles; first prize, $100; second prize, $50. Fifth, four-oared boats (lapstreak shells) with outriggers; distance, three miles; first prize, $300; second prize, $100.

COOPER'S POINT YACHT CLUB.—The annual regatta of the above named club is to take place on the Delaware river, starting from the buoy at Cooper's Point, on Monday, June 26th. The entries thus far have been forty-three, and the boats range in length from 15 to 60 ft., and they will be arranged in six classes—the purses to be contended for graduating from $100 to $25. The race will be in charge of the same committee that engineered it so successfully last year—composed of Captains R. L. West, D. C. Walker and Robert M. Fitch.

BOATING ON THE SCHUYLKILL.—A race came off on the Schuylkill River, Philadelphia, on the afternoon of June 16th, between the four-oared shells Idalia, of the Malta Club, and Volante, of the Vesper Club. The crews were as follows:—Idalia—J. L. Illman (stroke), E. Illman, A. Street, F. Horger (bow). Volante—James Mingus (stroke), R. Skinner, F. V. Bonnafan, R. Mingus (bow). The course was straightway, from Columbia Bridge to Turtle Rock, and the Volante won in 9:15. On the following day the four-oared shells, Wasp and Nautilus, had a spin from the Indian Club House to Columbia Bridge, the former winning in 17:30.

LACHINE BOATING CLUB.—The officers of this Canadian club, recently chosen, are as follows:—President, William McNaughton; vice president, S. H. Wallis; secretary and treasurer, James P. Dawes, Jr.; committee, Messrs. E. A. Whitehead, L. N. Benjamin, T. A. Crane, J. H. McNider, Charles Tyre, H. S. McDougall, C. H. Baldwin, Andrew Dawes, T. F. Tate, Andrew Robertson, Jr., and Robert Hamilton.

A DOUBLE SCULL RACE for a set of oars came off on the Ohio river, at Evansville, Ind., on June 15th, the Cornelia, pulled by Robt. Stinson and David Ingle, winning handily. Her competitors were the John Henry, rowed by W. H. A. Lewis and James Laughlin, and the Diamond, manned by James Boicourt and Silas Scantlin.

A CABLE TELEGRAM from London, dated June 17th, says that the yacht Enchantress, owned by Mr. Lorillard, had arrived at Southampton. Eight of her crew were arrested for mutiny, and one of them had been committed to prison on the charge of stabbing an officer.

THE miniature ship CITY OF RAGUSA, was spoken on June 1st by Captain Goodspeed, of the bark Hannibal, in lat. 41 37 N., lon. 50 25 W., nine days from New York.

TIME ALLOWANCE.—A rule of measurement for time allowance, materially differing from that heretofore in vogue, has been adopted by the New York Yacht Club, the basis of which is the displacement of a yacht instead of the area. The methods for determining this are as follows:—The areas of three sections, from the water line to the intersection of outer planking with keel, in the case of each yacht, one taken amidships, another equi-distant therefrom to the stern, shall be measured and determined in square feet. The cubical contents of the immersion shall then be calculated by multiplying the sum of the areas of the three sections by one-fourth the length on water line in feet and decimals, which shall, for the purposes of this measurement, be deemed the displacement of the yacht. The cube roots of the displacement shall be deemed the basis of the comparative allowances of time. In order to apply the basis of measurement, as above, to the sliding scale of allowances, graduated according to the time of making race, hitherto in use by the club (but for no other purpose), the cube roots of the displacements shall in all cases be multiplied by 100, thus forming tables of apportionments given in full in the yacht club books.

THE LATE RACE AT POUGHKEEPSIE.—Much dissatisfaction was evinced at the result of the Shatemuc Club regatta, and on Wednesday evening, June 21st, Grubb, Van Vliet and Brevoort will again take up the sculls, this time for a pair of miniature gold oars, presented by one of the members. It is thought that Grubb has the inside track.

A FOUR-OARED RACE took place over the course from Liverpool wharf to the mile-and-a-half buoy and back, Boston harbor, on June 14th, the Creeping Kate (Campbell, stroke, and O'Leary, bow), beating the crew of which the stroke and bow carsmen were named Butler.

ON TUESDAY EVENING, June 13th, a race took place between Jas. Stevens and "Buck" McTaun and Chris. Englehart and Matt. Carr, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in working boats, two miles up and return, for $25. It was won by the latter pair. Time, 35min.

THE TRIGGER.

TOURNAMENT IN OHIO.

There has been a great mortality among the pigeons at Youngstown, Ohio, recently, consequent upon the assembling there of a number of noted trigger pullers to compete for the prizes offered in the tournament held on the 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th inst. The sport began with a contest for prizes of $150, $100 and $50 respectively, 21 yards rise, 80 yards boundary, 10 birds each, which resulted as follows:—

John Spencer	1111111111—10	A. H. Bogardus	1011100111—7
W. P. Carson	1111111111—10	John Lovett	1001111110—7

Joseph Sawyer	1101111011—8	G. M. Smith	0110000000—2

Carson, Brown and Spencer having tied for the first prize, they shot at five birds more each, at twenty-six yards distance, with the following score:—Carson, 4; Spencer, 4; Brown, 3. Brown having fallen out, Carson and Spencer shot at three more birds each, at thirty-one yards:—Carson, 1; Spencer, 1. This being a tie, it was decided by another score, as follows:—Carson, 2; Spencer, 1. For the second prize, five birds each, twenty-six yards rise:—C. E. Lovett, 4; W. H. Thomas, 4. For the third prize, five birds each, twenty-six yards rise:—Miles Johnson, 4; Ira A. Paine, 4; J. E. Long, 3; Joseph Sawyer, 3. Johnson and Paine being a tie, shot at two birds each, at thirty-one yards rise:—Johnson, 2; Paine, 2. Another tie being declared, Johnson and Paine again shot as follows:—Johnson, 3; Paine, 2.

A shoot at ten birds each, for prizes of $100, $60 and $40, opened proceedings on the 8th inst., Long, C. E. Lovett and Johnson taking down nine each, and the former killing five birds straight and winning first prize in shooting off. Bogardus, Dexsey, Paine, Boyd, Lovett and Carson killed eight birds each and shot off for second prize, at five birds each. Bogardus, Paine and Lovett killed four each, and in shooting off at five more, 31 yards, Paine won, killing all to Bogardus' 3 and Lovett's 2. J. Sawyer won the third prize, killing four out of five in shooting off a tie of two a. A sweepstakes shoot, for $80, followed, five birds each: Bogardus winning, after shooting off ties of 4 and 3 with J. E. Long. The same day a match was shot between J. E. Long and Ira Paine, of 25 birds each, which Long won. The following is the score:—

Long	1111111111 1111111111 1111111111—25
Paine	1111111111 1111111111 1111101111—24

The first purse shot for on the 9th was the double bird, in which the marksmen shot at six double rises, 18 yards rise, 100 yards boundary. First prize, $150; second prize, $100; third prize, $50. The score was as follows:—

Spencer	11 11 11 11 11 11—12	C. Avery	11 11 11 10 10 10—10
Johnson	11 11 11 11 11 11—12	W. Wilbank	11 11 11 10 10 10—10
C. E. Lovett	11 11 11 11 10 10—11	W. Thomas	11 10 11 10 10 10—10
John Lovett	11 11 11 11 01 11—11	J. E. Long	11 10 11 10 10 10—10
Miles Johnson	11 11 11 11 11 01—11	W. P. Carson	11 10 01 10 10 10—9
W. Dempsey	11 11 11 10 10 10—10	A. H. Bogardus	11 10 10 10 10 10—9
W. P. Thomas	11 11 11 10 10 10—10	J. K. Lovett	11 10 10 10 10 10—9

Bogardus won the first prize on shooting off, killing eight birds from five double rises. As John Lovett killed only four birds on the first four double shots, he threw up his fifth shot. John Spencer took the second prize, and J. E. Long third on shooting off the ties.

An amateur shoot followed, five birds each, W. M. Osborn and L. B. Arkwright killing four each, and shooting off at three, when Arkwright won, killing 1 to 0. W. Ackley won the second prize. On the following day J. E. Long and G. M. Ayer shot a match at 40 birds each, the score being as follows:—

Long	1111111111 1111111111 1111111111 1111111111—40	Ayer	1111111111 1111111111 1111111111 1111111111—40

The tie was shot off at twenty-six yards, five more birds each, and each of the marksmen killed his bird each time. They then went back to thirty-one yards, and Ayer won by the following score:

Ayer	0 1 1 1 1—4	Long	1 0 1 0 0—2

In the afternoon Dr. W. L. Buckner won the prize of ladies' plate, after quite an interesting contest.

WARD CHALLENGES BOGARDUS.

James Ward, the celebrated pigeon shot of the New Dominion, being desirous of testing the skill of the champion of the states, Capt. A. H. Bogardus, forwards us the subjoined challenge, accompanied by $50 in gold. If the Capt. isn't inclined to accept the terms offered, perhaps some one else will. Read the challenge:—

TORONTO, C. W., June 11th, 1871.

FRANK QUEEN, Esq.—DEAR SIR.—I will make a match to shoot against Capt. Bogardus, champion shot of the United States, for five hundred dollars a side, in gold, and if not accepted by him in two weeks any one else can have the chance. The match to be shot at Buffalo, N. Y., and the conditions to shoot at one hundred single blackbirds each, from 21 and 7 ground traps, eighteen yards rise and eighty yards boundary; charge of shot not to exceed one and a half ounces. If the gun miss fire, not through the shooter's negligence, the shooter to have a fresh bird. I will find all the birds free, except what he have mentioned. I will shoot according to any rules. To show that I mean business, I have sent you fifty dollars in gold as forfeit; the balance I will either send to you or put up with Robert Newell, of the Forrester Club of Buffalo, or any one he may name in Buffalo belonging to the club. Any one accepting the same the day of shooting between the 15th of July and 1st of August. JAMES WARD.

J. V. BELOVER and Chas. Applegate shot at 50 single birds each, for $200, 21 yards rise and 90 ball, 1¼ ounce of shot, at South Amboy, N. J., on June 9th, the latter securing the victory by a score of 40 to 39.

E. J. BAKER and CAPT. JONES, of Fire Island, shot a match at Capt. Seeley's, Long Island, on June 15th, ten birds each, 21 yards rise, which the former won, killing six out of seven, when Jones, who had killed but two out of seven, gave up in despair.

PEDESTRIANISM.

WESTON'S WALK.—The judges in the recent attempt of E. P. Weston to walk 400 miles in five days, including 112 miles in twenty-four hours, at the Empire Rink, this city, have announced that the task was accomplished, commencing at 12.05 on the morning of Monday, June 12th, and finishing at 11.47 P. M. on Friday, 16th, thus winning by eighteen minutes. It is also stated that he succeeded in covering 112 miles inside of twenty-four hours, having 44¾ minutes to spare. Now we do not desire to refuse to any man the credit due to him for any performance, but we must state that we have serious doubts as to the accuracy of the statements made. Walking on a circular or square track is not a proper method of testing a pedestrian's abilities, as the amount which can be run on each circuit thereof will aggregate a very considerable distance in 400 miles. This, combined with the character of his previous attempts at various distances, convinces us that Weston is not deserving of the credit which the daily press have given him—that he did not perform either the feat of walking 112 miles in twenty-four hours, or 400 miles in five days. There are very many others equally skeptical with ourselves, and if the judges wish their reports to carry weight with it they should make affidavit to the correctness thereof.

CHARLES VS. ELLIOTT.—The walking match, for $100 a side, between F. P. Elliott and A. H. Searles, from Van Vorst Park, Jersey City, to the Newark Hotel, Newark, N. J., took place on Tuesday, 13th inst. They started from Jersey City at 1.05 P. M., followed by a large crowd and an open barouche, containing Peter Demarest, as time keeper; Frank Taylor, as stakeholder, and two judges. Prior to starting, the final deposit of $40 a side was put in the hands of F. Taylor. It was a well contested race for the first five miles; first one having the lead, then the other putting on a spurt and leaving his opponent behind. When about two miles from Newark, Searles took the lead and kept gradually gaining until he came in the winner at the hotel by fifteen seconds. Jas. McCormack trained Searles, and T. F. Smith trained Elliott. Searles made the distance in 1 hour, 19 minutes, according to the judges' report.

SMITH TO KILLBRYDE.—We were waited upon by Jim Smith, the champion long distance pedestrian, on the 19th inst., who desires us to state that he will make a match with Killbryde upon the latter's own terms, viz., allowing 1,500 yards in 25 miles, the stake to be not less than $250 a side, and the race to take place three weeks from date of signing articles. If this suits the Williamsburgher, let him meet Smith at this office on Friday, 23d inst., between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock P. M., to stake and make necessary arrangements.

JACK GOULDING is in Kansas City, Mo., rapidly recovering from a severe attack of unremitting fever.

Jerome Park Races.

FOURTH DAY, SATURDAY, JUNE 17TH.

On Saturday, the 17th, the fourth and final day, the weather was gloriously beautiful and the grand stand filled to overflowing with a gay and brilliant assemblage.

THE THREE YEAR OLD RACE,

for a purse of $600, with the entrance money to the second horse, and a penalty of 7lbs. for the winner of the Belmont or Ladies' stakes, of both 10lbs. extra, had eight entries, all of which came to the post. These were Mr. Withers' Miss Nellie, Mr. Coffee's Bonnie Scotland colt, dam Bonnett; Messrs. Parke's Nathan Oakes, Gen. Buford's Salina, Gov. Bowie's Belle Meade, Mr. O'Donnell's Fanchon, Mr. Littell's Rattan and Mr. Belmont's Lord Byron. Salina, on the strength of her running at the Lexington May meeting, where she ran the first of a mile and repeater in the unequalled time of 1:43, was made a hot favorite, the pool betting being $100 to $50 on her winning. She sold for $300: Fanchon, $120; Coffee, $140; Rattan, $140; Lord Byron, $100; field, $100. Several pools were sold on Salina, left out, and in these Fanchon and Coffee each brought $300; Rattan, $210; Lord Byron, $160; field, $180. Fanchon jumped off with the lead (which was delayed some time owing to the fractiousness of Rattan), Rattan second, Coffee's colt third, Miss Nellie and Salina the next pair. In this way they passed the stand, the quarter pole and around the club house bluff. Re-appearing in view, Fanchon was still in front, with Salina next, under a strong pull; Miss Nellie third, three lengths behind. After turning into the home-stretch Swim, on Salina, let her out, and, like an arrow from the bow, she shot past Fanchon and galloped home an easy winner by two lengths; Fanchon second, a length before Miss Nellie; Lord Byron fourth, close up; Coffee's colt next, Belle Meade sixth and Rattan last. Time, 2:17.

THE CONSOLATION PURSE

of $500, for horses beaten at this meeting, winners excluded, with an allowance of 7 lbs. if beaten more than once, one mile and three quarters, had four runners, Quintard, 3 years, 83 lbs; Gerold, aged, 115 lbs; Sir Rufus, 3 years, 90 lbs., and Finesse, 4 years, 96 lbs. In pools Finesse sold for $50; against $200 for the field. Gerold made the running for the first three-quarters of a mile, when Finesse, who had been lying second, went up, deprived him of the lead in a few strides and retaining it throughout, won with great ease under a hard pull by six lengths; Sir Rufus second, and Gerlad, who was pumped out, third. THE THREE MILE RACE, for all ages, for a purse of $1,200, entrance money to the second horse, had three runners—Helmbold, Catina and Aldebaran. Helmbold was the favorite at $600 to $100 against the field. Old Aldebaran, a wreck of his former self, made the running for the first mile, with Helmbold in attendance and Catina six lengths behind. Rounding the turn the rider of Helmbold broke his stirrup and the horse rushed in front and speedily opened a gap of half a dozen length. At last Robinson got his horse, Helmbold, under control, and, keeping up his long steady stride, was never again headed in the race, which he won in a canter by four lengths; Catina second, a dozen lengths before old Aldebaran. Time, 5:30¾.

SAME DAY.—Dash of three miles, for all ages; premium $1,200; entrance money to second horse.

Rigney & Green entered ch g Aldebaran, by Commodore, dam Nannie Lewis.....3

Time, 5:18¾.

THE STEEPLE CHASE,

for there were two, followed next. The first was the regular race on the programme for a purse of $800, and had only one entry, Col. McDaniels' horse Oystersman, who consequently galloped over the course and took the money. To compensate for this disappointment, Mr. Leonard Jerome, with his characteristic liberality and public spirit, offered a purse of $300 for an other steeple chase, with Oysterman excluded. For this three entered, viz., Joseph Donohue's ch g Tammany; Owner's ch h Surprise, and Rigney and Green's ch f fourth, close up; Coffee's colt next, Belle Meade sixth and Rattan last. Time, 2:17.

THE MATCH RACE

between R. W. Walden's ch m Echo and H. S. Barclay's b f Vitesse, two miles, for $1,000, was then run. Echo was the favorite at $500 to $200, and, making the running throughout, won easily by six lengths. Time, 3:34. The second match, between Climax and Overland, for $1,000, one mile, each to carry 130 lbs., resulted in Overland having forfeit.

SAME DAY.—Match, $500; two miles.

C. F. Howes named br h Climax, by Ballowwhite, dam Jewel, aged.....1

Mr. Fleischer named b h Overland, Lexington, dam Miss Tustee, aged.....2

This brought to a close the Jerome spring meeting, which, all things considered, was the most successful ever held on that track, and the receipts for admission for the entire meeting are reported to have been double those of any previous meeting of the Americus Jockey Club.

TYNG AND TOMPKINS HORSES.—Mr. A. Belmont purchased at Mr. Hamilton's sale of thoroughbreds, at Jerome Park, May 31st, the 3-year-old bay colt by Kentucky—Bloodflower, out of Bitterness (the dam of Ethard by Glencoe), for 600 guineas. Col. McDonald has purchased for Mr. John Brown, of this city, after winning the Belmont Stakes, a couple of days ago, the bay colt, 3 years old, by Lexington—Lida Clarke, by Glencoe; Mr. Charles Kenny, of the Clarendon Hotel in Lake city, who owned the dam of Joe Elliott, has used her again to Edward Everett, the sire of that horse. Mr. Sanford has built a magnificent stable on his farm, on the north Fifty-fifth street and Fifth avenue; it is fitting up in the most perfect manner. The Kyrle Park Queen, Bonnie, has been purchased by Mr. Charles Maxwell, civil engineer, and announced first of the string of a mile. Mr. James Lefferts, of Middletown, N.Y., has purchased the fine young trotting stallion Washington, a son of Ethan Allen, of Mr. R. M. Hanlon, of that place, for a large sum; he has also purchased the grey colt, Billy Boyce (by Lexington), and has sent him to the Fleetwood Park stables.

DEATH OF A SPORTSMAN THEREAIR.—We learn with regret of the death of Colonel James Kelligan, a resident of New Orleans, La., who died in that city on the 15th inst., after a short but severe illness. He owned the bonnie roan Gloucester, and the three year old colt, Sir Rufus, now in George Blow's stable, who ran second to Finesse, on Saturday last, at the Jerome Park Meeting.

CRICKET.

PHILADELPHIA vs. YOUNG AMERICA.

CIRARD vs. WISSAHICKON.

The second eleven of the Girard C. C., of Philadelphia, played a game on their ground, at Harrowgate, on Saturday, June 10th, with the Wissahickon Club. The latter is comparatively a new club, not having been organized a year yet, and as this is its second or third match. Wickets were pitched at half-past one, the Girard going to the bat, and making 25 runs for the first wicket down. The batting of Messrs. Blood, Shaw and Wilbraham, was excellent, as was also the bowling of Wilkinson. The Wissahickon came out eight ahead, in the first innings, the large number of byes, and the batting of Taylor and White, running up the scores very fast. At a quarter after six game was called, the Wissahickon being two runs ahead, with four wickets to go down. The score:—

CUPIDS' FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

THE LASSIE O' THE LEA.

BY ARTHUR W. FRENCH.

Across the debated lea, where rippling streamlets run,
There lives a little lass, the sweetest 'neath the sun—
Whose eyes are like the stars that shine up in the blue,
A face like roses kissed by summer's sun and dew;
Where never ever comes a care to shade her happy life,
For innocent she is of every worldly strife;
From noon till night she roams, like wild birds, glad and free,
Never dreamed of love, this Lassie o' the Lea.
Chorus—She is the sweetest lassie that dwells beneath the sun;
And by her ways so winning my heart at last has won,
Her smile is like the sunlight—it shines for all, and me,
Oh! don't I love this lassie, the Lassie o' the Lea.

How many times I've held her dimpled hand in mine,
And gazed into her eyes that seemed with love to shine,
Repeating o'er the tale that never will grow old,
And longing on my breast her form to ever hold;
But with a roguish smile she laughs my love away,
And still put off her "yes;" nor ever answer nay,
For like the caged bird she longs for liberty,
And love may never chain this Lassie o' the Lea.
Chorus—She is the sweetest lassie, etc.

TOO FREQUENTLY WEDDED.

A DASHING FOREIGNER WITH THREE WIVES.

The people of the region round about Poughkeepsie, N. Y., are all agog, and decidedly conversationally disposed, it seems, over the conduct of a foreigner named Louis Guiseppe Contarini, who has been arrested in that city on the charge of bigamy. In regard to the event the telegraph remitted the following information from thence on the 16th inst.:—Louis Guiseppe Contarini was first known hereabouts when he started a weekly newspaper in Matteawan, entitled The Mediterranean Reviewe, which soon, however, burst up. He became acquainted with Miss Mary Disteon, of this city, and soon married her. Not long afterwards he quit the neighborhood, and then his newmade wife lost all confidence in him, and proceeded to take legal measures for his capture. She and her father appeared before a magistrate and swore out a warrant against him for bigamy, believing that when he married Miss Disteon he had a wife in Brooklyn. The warrant was placed in the hands of the proper officers, but before they had time to serve it, Contarini appeared at his bride's residence and explained everything satisfactorily, to her, at least, and made her a present of a beautiful watch and chain. The next morning the two appeared before the magistrate, who issued the warrant and had the warrant nullified. The next morning Contarini published a card in the Poughkeepsie people, assigning reasons for his sudden disappearance, and also giving out that he had received a letter from the old country announcing that he had fallen heir to $75,000. His young wife swallowed it all, but not the father. He could not be hoodwinked. He made a trip to Brooklyn, and there ascertained that in 1861 Contarini married a little girl, aged 14 years, in that city, and after fleecing her father out of nearly all the money he had, deserted his wife and fled to Pittsmond, Va., where, during the war, he took up arms on the confederate side. In the meantime he married a beautiful girl in Richmond, named Virginia Saunders, who died sometime afterwards in Canada. Leaving the south the close of the war, Contarini came north, and on October 26th, 1870, married Mary Diston, who had just news reaching her ears of his Brooklyn wife, she hastened to obtain a divorce, and caring to prosecute for bigamy. She succeeded in February, 1871, but that does not save Contarini from answering to the charge of bigamy, which charge is vigorously pushed by Miss Diston's father, though up to 10 o'clock this morning Miss Diston was not aware of that fact. Through the same process the following particulars were received, dated June 21st:—Louis Guiseppe Contarini, arrested here on a charge of bigamy, was this morning examined before Recorder Robert J. Taylor. His counsel is District Attorney Wm. J. Thorne. The consel for the prosecution is Daniel W. Guernsey. Contarini was rather flashily attired in a black velvet coat, white vest, and drab pants. He wore side whiskers and a heavy mustache. As he sat down his third wife, Mary Diston, took a chair beside him. She was attired in a straw colored walking suit, and wore a heavy gold watch and chain and other ornaments. About six feet away sat the second wife, now known as Louisa Meike. She was dressed in a dark drab traveling suit, with fashionable jockey. As Contarini entered the dock he gave one quick glance at her, and that was all. She, on the contrary, gazed earnestly and steadily at him, and at times smiled. Presently his counsel whispered:—"Have you ever seen her before?" He replied:—"No, never." The counsel for the prosecution next whispered to Mrs. Meike:—"Have you ever seen him before?" she replying, "Yes, I rather kalkeriate I have," and still kept gazing at him, he at all times avoiding her glance.

The second wife, Louisa Eicke, was the first witness. As she ascended the stand it was apparent that she meant business. The counsel for the prosecution, after she had sworn, said:—"Look at that man (Contarini) and have you seen him before?" Witness.—"Yes, sir, at down, with a derisive smile upon his lips. My parents resided there; he left me in 1862, but I ran foul of him again in December last. He recognised me, but I would not recognise him. I was married to him on December 31st, 1861, in St. John's church, Varick street. New York. We lived together as man and wife until March 28th, 1862, at 64 Lispenard street. I stayed there two or three months after he left me; I have had no communication with him since. He married me under the name of Louis G. Contri. He is the man I married, I think. I'm not mistaken. I am positive."

Cross-examined—I first saw him at 64 White street; he came alone; I can't tell the month or day; I never saw or heard of him before that time; I dare say we were married in two months after; he gave recommendations to my parents; they now live in Second avenue, between Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh streets; my father is in Indiana; been there eight or ten days; I have never seen the clergyman who married us since; we never kept house; he hadn't money enough to keep house with. (Laughter.) I had to pay out money to get his boots repaired. (Great laughter.) I got the money from my mother; I'm married again; never had any children; I was between 14 and 15 years of age when I married Contri; my parents told me to say 14, and I did. (Laughter.) I used him; to ward the last he belonged to what was called the Copperhead party." (Great laughter.)

Counsellor Thorne—He's among that class now, ain't he? (Laughter.)

Witness—I should say so. (Laughter.)

Witness—I have been married twice since he left me; once in 1865 and then in 1871, the day I got a divorce from Contri. I've got three husbands now, and all living. (Witness and audience laughing.) I'm living with my third husband. He is a carpenter. He got a separation bill from my second husband. Lawyer Chase got my divorce for me. He told him I wanted a divorce from Contri on the ground of desertion, and I got it.

Witness was further examined by the defence, in order, if possible, to find some flaw in her testimony. She answered all the questions in a very straightforward and unhesitating manner. The pith of the evidence is given in a statement which she made to the reporter, after dinner, at the Poughkeepsie Hotel. She said:—

The second wife's statement is as follows:—I was forced to marry Contri by my father. Contri told him he had wronged me, when my father said I must marry him or go to the House of Refuge. I was young then and didn't know as much as I do now. Contri told my father a white lie, but I married him because I did not wish to go to the House of Refuge. After I married him I avoided him all I could, and every time I saw him coming I would leave the house. One time I was gone seven days, and no one knew where I was. Finally he enlisted in the Montreal Rifles, and sent a letter to me by Charles Anchise, a revenue officer, saying that he knew I did not love him and he was going to leave me forever. Why, when I married him, my father had to pay the dominie, "Oh, I'm so glad I got rid of that fellow! I don't want him; I'll be sent to Sing Sing on my account. The world is wide enough for both of us. He never gave me a cent from the time he married me till he left me. He told me one day he would sell his sword and get me a pair of shoes, but he didn't. I am happy now; I've got a good husband, and I love him. I wish they would call my mother up here. She would identify Contri right away. A further examination of the case has been postponed until Tuesday, June 20th, at 10 A. M.

A SHAKER ELOPEMENT.—Pittsfield was thrown into an abnormal state of excitement on Thursday morning by a report that Ira Lawson, the leading business man and member of the church family of the Hancock Shakers, had eloped on the previous evening with Sister Eliza Van Valen, a matronly and prepossessing lady of about his own age, and some loose change for their use and convenience. The following particulars of the great sensation have been published:—The first known of his intended departure was yesterday noon. The preparations of the couple excited some little surprise in the minds of the Shaker sisters, just after the dinner hour, and led to inquiries as to such unusual measures. Ira was interrogated by some of the leading Shakers and admitted frankly his intention of taking leave that evening, and gave his reasons therefor. He expressed his intention of returning in "a week or ten days," for the purpose of adjusting all matters of business and of giving his successor an insight into his own way of doing things, and his re-appearance is confidently expected. The young couple are about 38 or 35 years of age, and, in their relations at the Shaker Society, have enjoyed those privileges of social intercourse that the individuals of the opposite sex, possessing like inclinations, are too apt to conduce to relations of a more intimate character, and which go to prove made to live alone"—nor women either. The grist mill of the Shakers has been controlled almost exclusively by Mr. Lawson. They before yesterday he was at the mill and requested a squaring up of the books and cash by the miller, Mr. Power, which was shortly accomplished. A livery, appeared before the large brick residence of the society last evening, at 8 o'clock, and Lawson, with his companion, took their departure from the Ran, dom Shakers, where both have lived from childhood, both grown into the confidence and esteem of the Shaker society, and both attained to a position of influence among the brethren and sisters.—Boston Traveler, June 8th.

A FRAUDULENT DIVORCE.—A few months ago, the Supreme Court decreed a divorce to Samuel C. Jacques, from his wife, Sarah B. Jacques, on the ground of her adultery. Witnesses were then heard for the libellant, and Mrs. Jacques did not appear, though she had acknowledged service of the writ upon her. Since then it has been alleged that she was not aware of the existence of the case, and that the use of her name in accepting service was fraudulent. Judge Ames at once issued a warrant against W. H. Niles, a lawyer, by whom the writ was endorsed, ordering him to answer as for a contempt. Mr. Niles appeared and denied having anything to do with the matter, but it transpired that he occasionally had allowed one George H. Holden to use his name on legal papers. It also appeared that Mr. Holden procured an officer in Middlesex county to serve a copy of the writ on a woman who personated Mrs. Jacques, which service, for the service returned to the court. In the meantime, both Jacques and Holden had absconded. A few days ago Holden returned and was soon arrested. A bail suit subsequently gave bail in $1,500, to answer before the Supreme Court. Jacques is still beyond the reach of the law and the officer has so returned. In the meantime the divorce rendered in favor of Jacques, has been declared null and void.—Boston Herald, June 6th.

LEXR "ANY OTHER MEN."—The Evening Star, of Washington, relates that two of the most noted women suffragists of that city, in company with their husbands, went into a restaurant the other day and asked for oysters. The proprietor invited them to a private room, which they declined saying:—"Oh, no! we want to do just as we please." They went to the raw-box—the quartet of them—and ate raw oysters until the four got outside of two dozen raw, when they called for four glasses of ale, and drank them down as though they had been used to oysters and ale. They then walked out, like "any other men."

A PROMISING YOUTH.—A young lad, only 14 years old, at Warrensburg, Mo., who had seduced a Mrs. Toucey, shot and killed her husband the other day because he ordered him out of his house. Owing to his extreme youth he was not arrested, it being supposed that the woman advised the boy to commit the deed.

SLIGHTED LOVE.—The following account of the cold-blooded and atrocious murder of Lizzie McDaniels, a young lady, by a rejected lover, is from the Marysville, Cal., Appeal, who, as the telegraph has reported, was afterwards hunted down and shot by the enraged people:—The deceased, Miss Lizzie McDaniels, was accompanied by a Mr. Wells and a lady. It appears that the murderer, called by some an Italian, by others "Portuguese Joe," had been paying his attentions to the young lady for two years past, though she tried to discourage his suit. He had told her that he would kill her if she did not consent to marry him, but it seems that she regarded his threats rather lightly. From all we can learn regarding this unfortunate affair, this man, "Portuguese Joe," as we will call him, came up behind the ladies and their escort, seized Miss McDaniels by her head, and bending it backward, plunged a knife in her throat and drew it downward, inflicting a horrible wound, laying the throat open the whole length, and even cutting her bosom. The attack was so sudden, so unexpected, that her escort, Mr. Wells, was taken completely by surprise and knew not what was transpiring until the life-blood of the victim showed him the horrid nature of the assault. As the murderer released his hold on the victim, Wells shot at, but missed him, and before he could fire again the villain turned a corner and escaped. Miss McDaniels was about eighteen years of age, an estimable lady and a general favorite. In one dispatch her name is given as Sosie, in another as Lizzie. Her mother is on a visit to New York and the melancholy news will fall doubly severe on her, who left her daughter in the full vigor of youth. The community has been thrown into a terrible state of excitement by this act, and have united in hunting down the wretch. Parties are scouring the surrounding country, and it seems impossible for him to escape. If taken alive the courts will not be troubled with a trial. Judge Lynch will preside, and a stout rope and short shrift will be given to the murderer of Miss McDaniels, a young and lovely woman, which all the glories of life opening before her, stricken down by the hand of one who professed unbounded love for her, who would have made her his wife."

A STRANGE PRESENTIMENT.—The following sad story of one of the victims of the late Pittston disaster is told by the Scranton, Pa., Republican:—"William Jones expired about 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the Tuesday following the catastrophe, and was the last added to the list of those upon whom the death angel laid his hand in that awful havoc. He was a Welshman, and had been in this country about seven months. On the morning of the dreadful day in question he had taken his breakfast and his wife had made ready his dinner and set the pail beside him. For some time he sat wrapped in thought, his arms folded, his eyes fixed vacantly upon the stove and a deep melancholy apparently brooding over him. He was aroused from his reverie by his wife telling him that his dinner was ready and that he would be late, as the bell had rung. He started to his feet, and, gazing upon her for a moment with a look full of tenderness and significance, said to her—'If I should not come back alive would you be in such a hurry getting me out?' The wife answered 'No,' but remarked that 'if he was going at all it was time he was gone.' He lifted his pail without saying a word, and, after kissing his wife, kissed his four little children, who were sitting playing on the doorstep. When he had got about fifty yards from his home he returned again and kissed his wife and children once more with great fervency. His wife noticed that he was the victim of gloomy forebodings, and as he turned away she was about to entreat him not to go to work if he apprehended any danger. But hope and courage and the pressing necessities of their family overcame her intention and she let him go. She stood in the door and watched him go on his way to the fatal pit. When at a point where he turned out of her sight he paused and cast a wistful look toward his home and little ones, and, seeing his wife, waved with his hand a last adieu. He 'parted with his loved ones forever.'"

DIVORCE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT.—The divorce laws of Connecticut have long been a matter of scandal, not only at home, but in other states. Yesterday a bill was presented in the senate which attempts to remedy one part of the difficulty—that of the resort of persons out of the state to our courts for relief that they cannot obtain at home. The first section of the proposed act requires a residence of three years in the state, or that the cause of divorce shall have been in the state, in case of a shorter residence. The present statute obliges only one of the parties to be a resident for the length of time, but the new act, as we understand, embraces and requires this of petitioner and respondent. The following sections prescribe which of the two shall marry and after what time, in all instances permitting a second marriage to the innocent party alone, and postponing the time for an after marriage in ordinary cases for three years, and when the cause is adultery, for seven years. The party who gives occasion for the divorce is forbidden to marry during the life of the injured party. This bill will undoubtedly be amended in some minor points by the committee, but it begins the discussion.—Palladium, New Haven, Conn., June 10th.

MALPRACTICE.—In the case of Dr. Oliver W. Reid, of Philadelphia, who was in January last convicted of performing a criminal surgical operation on a female, Judge Paxson, on June 10th, upon a motion for a new trial, delivered his opinion. The female upon whom the abortion was performed had been arrested for the co-defendant, to examine and upon her evidence Dr. Reid was convicted. Judge Paxson overruled the motion for a new trial, and sentenced Reid to six years and six months imprisonment in the penitentiary.

OUTRAGE.—George H. Carlisle, of Malden, Mass., was held in $1,000, on the 13th inst., to answer to the charge of attempting by force and violence, on the 11th inst., to commit a heinous crime upon the person of Ella Campbell, a child not more than 12 years of age.

A FREAK OF NATURE.—A Norwegian girl at Sioux City, Iowa, recently gave birth to a female child, whose paternity she declares to have been a freak of nature.

"GREAT EXPECTATIONS."

An Adaptation of the Late Charles Dickens' Novel of that name, by W. S. Gilbert.

At the Court Theatre, in Sloane Square, London, Eng., on May 27th, this play was acted for the first time. Concerning it and its performance the Sunday Times prints the following:—

So rigidly has Mr. Gilbert adhered to the words of his original that it is hard to find a phrase which memory does not associate with the well known novel. So far as regards selecting the portions of the story which are capable of reproduction in a dramatic shape, the task of adaptation has been very successfully accomplished. The faults of exceptional shortness, monotony and the acts are precisely as condensed as they can be, regard being had to clearness and intelligibility of narrative. The prologue, which shows Joe Gargery's forge adjoining the churchyard, a scene of great beauty and nature, introduced for the sake of showing the latter almost diabolical. Pip befriends Magwitch at a time when the poor old fellow is standing at a stirring pace. Glenelg and Gallstone are the villain and Orlick. The definite action of the play commences, we are now in the interior of Joe's forge, and the characters (with one exception) who are to take important parts in the coming drama present themselves. Joe Gargery, good natured and grimy, expresses the most striking of phrases. Pip, grown to dawning manhood, has cultivated tastes and a desire to rise in the world which makes him contemptuous to the affection lavished upon him by Biddy, Joe's adopted daughter, and cause him to turn with a cry of pain from the flag fell, which adorns the bosoms of the two convicts, Magwitch and Orlick. BASE BALL.

FOREST CITY vs. HAYMAKERS.

On Monday, June 19th, the Forest City Club, of Cleveland, played the Haymakers, of Troy, at Troy, N. Y., in which the Clevelanders came out victorious. The game, which the Troy Press, began at 3 P. M., with the Haymakers at the bat, and Mr. Leroy, of the Champion Club, of West Troy, as Umpire.

First Inning—McGeary first took the bat and retired on a fly to first base. York, by a long hit to right field, passed third base, and on a wild pitch scored. Kimball, on called balls, and wide attempt to field an passed balls by White; Pratt out, his base on a safe hit by first, and Flowers scored. Four runs; Flynn out on a fly to Pike; Craver out on a fly to center; Flynn took base on a second on a first base hit by Craver; Pratt out on a fly to Kimball, passed ball; Kimball and Craver took third; McMullin and Sutton out on fly ball and Carlton; King home; Pike, by a liner to right field, out; Bellan struck the baseball by long hit to right field, and Flynn, Craver and White tapped out to McGeary; Allison was tired by King. Two runs. White tapped out to McGeary; Allison was tired by King. No runs.

Second Inning—Fisher struck out by a liner to Craver. No runs.

2. Craver and McGeary were struck out by Sutton and Carlton. Carlton and York went out on a fly to E. White. No runs.....Carlton got his base on a hit to Flowers, but on Bellan was after it too, neither of them could do anything with it up; Kimball popped up a fly to Bellan and went out; Carlton went to second on a good hit by Pratt, who got his first; Sutton batted Pratt out at second and got first; E. White hit to Pike, who headed off Sutton, who was on his way to second. No runs. Score, 4 to 0.

3. Flowers first on a muffed liner by Kimball, stole second and run home on a long hit of Flynn's to right field. Flynn got second. Craver went out on a fly to Allison at second base, and McMullin hit to King, went out on a fly to Allison at second base. Pike struck out in Allison and went out at first. Flynn coming home. Pike struck out the innings by striking out. Two runs. E. White sent a fly to King, but Steve muffed it, and White took his base. Base went out by Flowers and Craver. E. White came home on a first base hit by J. White. Allison hit by third base and got his first. Fisher hit to Craver and went out at first, and Carlton, who was anxious to Craver and went out at first, and Carlton, who was anxious to batting, White home, went out on a fly to York. One run. Score, 6 to 0 in favor of the Forest Citys.

4. Bellan struck a hot one to Sutton, who fielded it beautifully to first in time to put Bellan out. Craver took his first on a safe hit to centre, and stole his second and third. McGeary out by Base and Carlton, Craver coming home just in time, for York wound up the innings by being fyed by Kimball at centre field. One run.....Kimball struck a foul, which McGeary took on the fly. Pratt hit to Pike, who stopped it prettily, but threw it badly to Craver, and Pratt secured his second base, but remained there, for Sutton was put out by Flowers and Craver, and E. White went out on a fly to King. No runs. Score, 7 to 1.

5. Flowers was nicely disposed of by Pratt and Carlton; Flynn by Allison and Carlton and King by Sutton and Carlton. No runs.....The Allison and Carlton and King by Sutton and Carlton. No runs.....The "Clevelands" obtained four runs in this innings by some clever batting, Allison's three baggers, and all were secured after two men were put out. Base went out by Flowers and Craver and J. White tipped out to McGeary. Allison took his base on a left field liner. Fisher hit a fly to right field and Craver called for "Chipper" to take it, but as York was also running for it, they were afraid of a "collision," so the ball dropped between them and Fisher got his base. Carlton hit to left field, got second and Allison and Fisher came home. Kimball took his base on a muffed ball. Pratt hit to Pike, but he did not stop it, and Pratt got his base, Carlton coming home. So ton hit a hot one, which struck McMullin in the left leg and bounded to right field, allowing Sutton to take first and Kimball to score his run. E. White closed the innings by batting Sutton out at second. Four runs. Score, 8 to 7.

6. McMullin out by Pratt and Carlton. Pike, by the longest hit of the game, made a clean home run, scoring the only run of the inning, for Bellan went out by Pratt and Carlton and Craver on fly to Pratt.....Two runs were made in this and only two were earned. White first on muff by Pike and home on Base' third base hit to left field, who came home on a third base hit by J. White to centre field. Allison first on a muff by Pike; J. White home. Bases made all. Conant hit to third and gets first on a safe hit. Kimball and Pratt retired on fouls to McGeary. Carlton, who was on first, got off his base and McMullin headed him off with the ball and he started between the bases; Allison, who was on third, started for home, and Craver, instead of getting the man out between second and first, threw it to third, and Allison scored his run and Carlton got second. Sutton, by a long hit to left field, got home, bringing home Carlton. E. White secured his base by being fyed by Craver. No runs.....Conant got his base on a hit to Flowers, but on Bellan was after it too, neither of them could do anything with it up; Kimball popped up a fly to Bellan and went out; Carlton went to second on a good hit by Pratt, who got his first; Sutton batted Pratt out at second and got first; E. White hit to Pike, who headed off Sutton, who was on his way to second. No runs. Score, 4 to 0.

7. The Trojans were greatly discouraged at the result of the last innings, and went in with little hope of overcoming the odds against them. McGeary and York fouled out to White, and Flowers was fyed by Pratt. No runs.....Kimball and Pratt got their bases on safe hits. Sutton hit to Flowers, and Pratt went out at second, and Sutton at first, making a pretty double play. Kimball, who made third, started for home and was caught between bases by McGeary and Bellan, and put out. No runs. Score, 15 to 8.

8. Flynn second on bad throw of Sutton's to first. King out no fly to Kimball. McMullin out by Allison to Carlton, Flynn home. Allison closed the innings by fouling to White. One run.....Pratt second on a long hit to left, and third on Sutton's hit to left. E. White first on safe hit; Pratt home. Base got first, but batted E. White out at second. J. White retired on a fly to York; Sutton home. Allison and Base went out at second. Two runs. Score, 17 to 9 in favor of Cleveland.

9. Bellan fouled out to White. Craver took his base on a safe hit to centre. McGeary out on foul to Pabor. Craver came home on York's third base hit to centre, who also came home on a passed ball. Flowers was retired by Bass and Carlton. Two runs.....J. White, Kimball and Pabor each scored a run in this innings, Pabor being given a base by a muffed fly by Flynn, leaving the score 20 to 11 in favor of the Forest Citys. The score:—

CLEVELAND vs. LOWELL.

On June 13th the Forest City nine, of Cleveland, O., played their first game of the season in Boston, their adversaries being the Lowell Club nine. The Forest Citys were the first at the bat, and J. White was the only representative that reached the home plate, and for the Lowells Miller performed the same office. In the second innings both clubs scored four runs, and in the third both retired for a blank. In the fourth innings the Lowells fairly astonished their friends by their brilliant display at the bat. After scoring seven runs off Pabor's pitching the visitors thought it best to relieve him, and accordingly sent in their former pitcher, Pratt, the swiftest pitcher that has ever been in Boston. The change worked well, as the Lowells failed to make another run. At the commencement of the fifth innings the game stood 12 to 6 in favor of the Lowells, with the visitors at the bat. Pratt, Sutton and Bass scored runs, and, on the Lowell side, Conant, by a muff of Allison's, got round. From the sixth innings to the close of the game the Forest City Club rallied, played in fine style and won the game. The score:—

CLEVELAND vs. BOSTON.

This is a season of surprises, and amongst the recent unexpected results of games played between leading organizations may be named the first match between the Forest City nine, of Cleveland, and the Boston nine, which took place at Boston June 14th. The attendance was not large, as the display made by the Cleveland nine in their game with the Lowells did not warrant any close contest with the stronger nine of the Boston Club, and hence not over a thousand people were present as spectators. The contest, however, proved to be another practical illustration of the "glorious uncertainty," ending in a well earned victory for the Cleveland Club.

The close of the seventh innings left the game in a very one-sided position, the figures of 7 to 3 in favor of Cleveland being a very pleasant surprise to the Bostonians. In the eighth innings the Forest Citys were whitewashed, after which, McVey, of the Bostons, took the bat smiling, and determined to do his best to save the defeat of his club, and driving a ball to left field, earned first; similar luck to second on a passed ball, but Harry Wright then hit a safe one to right field, sending McVey home. Harry then stole to second, and on a passed ball goes to third. Things now began to look encouraging for the Reds, and every one was on the qui vive to see what Gould would do, he having been particularly unfortunate. He fouled out on a sharp fly-tip under the bat to J. White. Schaefer then sent a liner to centre field, bringing Harry home and making first, after which he stole his a cond and third. Conant then hit a fine one to left field, sending Schaefer home, making the game very exciting, the Bostons having one run to tie their opponents. Cone stole to second. Spalding hit a powerful one, which looked as if it would go over Allison's head, but did not, for that fine player caught it on the fly, and Barrows closes the innings by going out on the fly to Kimball. Cone left on third. Score—Cleveland, 7; Bostos, 6.

The ninth innings was then commenced amidst the greatest excitement, although good order prevailed. Carlton earns first by a fine hit to left field; Kimball out on foul fly by McVey; Pratt hits a hot grounder to Schaefer, who fields it beautifully to Jackson, forcing Conant out, but Jackey did not field it quick enough to make the double play, Pratt getting to first. Sutton sends Pratt to third on his fine hit to left field. E. White hits to Schaefer, who throws poorly to Gould, White getting first for the only time in the game, Pratt coming home on the error and Sutton going to second base, retires on a sharp fly-tip well taken by McVer, Sutton and E. White being left. One run.

The Reds had to get three runs to win and two to tie. Jackson to the bat amid much excitement, as he had not yet made a first base hit, and as he has a peculiar faculty for saving games the crowd looked for something from him in that line; he hits to Base, who throws to Carlton for the first out, and he had to reach for it, and the umpire gives Jackson his base. This was an erroneous decision, but from where Mr. Bush stood it looked as if Carlton took his foot off the base, but he did not. Barnes forced Jackson out at second, and on a poor throw of J. White's to Carlton, Barnes goes to third. McVey comes to the bat smiling and has a chance to save the game. Two runs to tie, with Barnes at third. Mac hits to Kimball, sending Barnes home, but going out himself at first. Harry Wright now takes his turn at the bat in his hard task before him. He finishes the game by hitting to Sutton, who fields him out at first, thus closing the game, with the Cleveland boys the victors after a hard fought and well earned victory. Score 9 to 7.

The features of the playing for the Bostons was the superb catching of McVey, who did not have a passed ball and led at the bat. The score:—

CARD FROM THE CLEVELAND CLUB.—The secretary of the Cleveland Club sends us the following communication relative to their failure to carry out their engagement with the Atlantics:—

RECORD CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—Please say, in justice to the Forest City Club, that the reported engagement of that club to play the Atlantics and Stars in New York on the 26th inst., has this existence and no more. When our eastern tour was sketched last April, the Atlantics were included and so notified, to which they made no reply. On the 15th of May a prominent member of the Club, and Secretary of the National Association, wrote me to the following language:—"I would state for your future guidance that the Atlantic Club is entirely disorganized. In their game with the Rockford Club they played men from different clubs and their exhibit was that the only remaining members of the old Atlantics (Thompson and McDonald) have left them, and it is doubtful if the club plays any more matches." This story being apparently confirmed by the New York press, the game was written off, and the day given to the Stars, we offering to defray any expenses which the Atlantics had suffered in the matter. Very respectfully, F. H. MASON, Secretary F. C. B. B. C.

AN EFFICIENT OFFICER RE-ELECTED.—On Monday, June 19th, the Mutuals held a meeting at Collier's rooms, and re-elected Mr. ALEX. V. Davidson as business manager and secretary. One result of the election was the prompt arrangement of several important contests on an equitable footing, as regards terms, &c. Among the games arranged for are the following:—On Tuesday, June 20th, they go to Philadelphia, and play the Athletics; on Thursday, the 22d, the Olympics, of Washington, play them on the Union Ground, Williamsburgh, L. I.; and on Monday, the 26th, the Kelloggs will play them on the same ground.

WHITE STOCKINGS vs. OLYMPIC.

THE TABLES TURNED.

The third of the series of matches for the championship between these two clubs took place on the 13th inst., in Washington, before an assembly of about 3,000 persons, among whom were seen Secretary Boutwell, English Minister Thornton and many other public officials. Among the sports present from other cities, the huge shoulders of O'Baldwin, the Irish Giant, rose in their massive proportions. It will be recollected that the Olympic short-handed, having missed Sweasy and Allison, started upon their recent tour and were badly defeated by the White Stockings, the score being 14 to 4; in the second contest both Allison and Sweasy took part, neither of them being in condition to play. In that game they were again defeated, 9 to 7, after whitewashing the Chicagos eight successive times; their defeat being attributable to the bad play of three of the in-field in the ninth innings. This was their last defeat, for, from that time to this date, in every important match, their play has been first class, in view of these circumstances, much interest centered in the match played on the 13th inst., the friends of the Olympic being confident that they would "get away" with the White Stockings. The Chicagos were confident of victory, their friends and those who staked money upon them, relying upon some heavy batting somewhere; but that somewhere did not come this time.

THE GAME

Was one of the finest ever witnessed in Washington, although, to a casual observer, it might appear otherwise, as marked was the contrast in the play of the two nines. Both nines were in good condition and evidently felt well. The Olympics won the toss and sent the Whites to the bat, and then the fun commenced. From beginning to end the Olympics out-batted and out-fielded their opponents, making but two errors in their field play, neither of which affected the score, to ten fielding errors by the Whites, six of which affected the score. The Whites learned, in the previous contest, that the Olympic out-field could not be trusted with a long-hit ball, and inasmuch as they had won the last match by hitting to the in-field, they saw no reason why they should not do so now, and so they batted down; but this time "it was no go," as nearly everything so batted was "gobbled up." Force, Waterman, Brainard and Leonard, with Mills to help them at the first, put out on the beam nineteen men, sixteen going out on the first base. The play of Force and Brainard was brilliant. Only seven fly balls were taken, Hall securing four of them. Allison, in addition to having no passed balls, had the credit of a clean home run.

On the other hand, some fine playing was done by Pinkham and Treacy; the latter did some fine fielding, the catch of the game being made by him—a one-hand catch on a jump in the air, taking the ball as it was passing over his head. Foley took three flys in the right field in good style. Brainard's pitching was very effective, though at times a little wild; in fact, two of the runs scored by the Whites were made by wildly pitched balls striking the home plate and shooting beyond Allison's reach. He fielded well in his position. Zettlein was regular and effective and as smiling as ever. The wind interfered considerably in the early part of the game, both with the pitching and the fielding. Mr. Beardsley discharged the duties of umpire fairly and impartially, although he had several close decisions to make, only one of which seemed doubtful to the outsiders. His decisions were received with marked respect.

In the first three innings the Chicagos failed to score, but two men making base hits and two reaching first on errors, the only runs made in the game. One of these was put out on the second and the other left. The Olympics scored nothing in the first. Treacy making his brilliant catch in this innings. In the second they scored one, Leonard being the man. A chance was given either Hodes or Foley to put him out on a fly, but, as Wood did not designate which should take the ball, they, to save a collision, let the ball drop between them—an evident error of Wood's, and, therefore, not a base hit. When the ball was thrown to Wood, who was of his base, he began to "chin" the players, so Leonard took the second. Treacy let Brainard's fly pass between his hands, so Leonard, on three errors, scored a run.

In the third Berthrong led off by going out on a fly to Wood; Waterman hit a bounder between short and third for one base, and got his second by a sharp stealing run and third on a hit of Force's to Duffy, who threw wild to the first. Force stole his second. Mills hit a ball to Wood, who squared for it, but, much to his astonishment, it bounded over his head. Waterman and Force scoring; Mills stole second; a muff thrown ball by Simmons let Allison have a base; Glenn batted to Zettlein, who threw to Wood at second, but he dropped it and a double play was lost. Mills scoring. Two runs secured Leonard. Brainard hit for his base to left short, bringing in Allison and Glenn, but was left by Hall, who went out on a fly by Treacy. Five runs and none earned.

In the fourth Wood sent an apparently safe one by Brainard, but Force went for it, and by a magnificent left hand stop cut him off at first, amid prolonged applause at the play. A first base hit by Simmons, and a second base hit by Treacy, followed by one in their left hand, and both tacked thorough organization and practice, the players on both sides showing that all of them did not occupy home positions. The ground is of hard, dry sand, quite level and good for fielding, except in spots in the out-field, where it is muddy. The game opened with the Champions at the bat, and bat for errors at third base they would have been disposed of for a single; instead, however, they scored three runs. On the other side, too, but for misplays at third base, the Actives would have been whitewashed, neither player in this position apparently knowing how to field ground balls, both flunking the hot ones sent them, though they captured fly balls well. In the second innings Clark and Willis batted for one earned run, but being assisted by two dropped flies, three more runs were scored, while on the other side the Actives drew their first goose egg. In the third innings the pitching was well supported on both sides, and the result was a mutual whitewashing, Pettit, who had taken Hayes' place at short field, doing service in that position, and Romer and Willis taking two fly balls pretnly.

In the fourth innings the Champions again scored 3 runs, though earning but 1, weak third base play being the cause. In this innings the Actives scored their first earned runs, a double play by Willis and Clark being a feature of the Champion's fielding. In the fifth innings the Champions scored 2 to the Actives 1, Halpin marking his play with a pretty one-handed catch. In the sixth innings the Champions again drew a blank through the good fielding of Pettit, and the Actives rallying at the bat, they added 3 to their score, two of which were earned, Wyks making a pretty foul fly catch. This left the totals at 11 to 10, the Champions being in the van. The game was now in an interesting position, and the movements of the players were eagerly watched. It turned out, however, that the assemblage had seen the best part of the contest, as the Actives began to muff badly, Pettit playing as poorly as he had before played well. What between his errors and those of Fbinair and Ketcham, no less than 12 runs were added to the Champion's score, without a single run being earned, but seven first base hits were made in the three innings out of 24 chances at the bat. This showed effective pitching but bad fielding. On the other side the Actives also failed to earn a run, and they only scored in their ninth innings after a muff by Romer had allowed them to escape a whitewash. The final result was the success of the Champions by a score of 28 to 16, when, had the pitching on both sides been properly supported, the score would have been 4 to 4 only.

The umpire did not excel in judgment, nor did he observe the rule of calling balls properly, for he allowed ball after ball which touched the ground to go by uncalled, when the rules declare that every "unfair" ball must be called in the order of its delivery. The contest throughout was played in a very friendly spirit, and, but for the fielding errors, would have been a good game. The score:—

BOSTON vs. CLIPPER.

On June 9th a game was played on the grounds of the Bostons, between that club and the Clippers, of Lowell, which resulted in an easy victory for the Reds. Gray, the catcher of the Lowell club, was severely injured by a foul tip ball striking him on the nose in the last innings. The score:—

ECKFORD vs. ATHLETIC.

The Brooklyn Athletics, fresh from their victory over the Star nine, played the pre-determined Eckfords on June 14th, on the Capitoline grounds, L. I., and the game after being delightful and the grounds in good condition, a good game was expected. The Eckfords were on hand in full force and in prime condition for play, but the Athletics were minus the services of their catcher, and they had to take Burdock from short field to fill the position, and with a heavy weight "cub" in the right field, and Wiggins at short stop, they entered upon the contest anything but prepared for play, as the result proved. It is scarcely necessary to give the details of this match, for it turned out to be a very one sided affair indeed. The Eckfords opened play at the bat, and in the first six innings they scored 20 runs, of which but 7 were earned, errors in nearly every position giving the Eckfords chances for runs not earned by batting. On the other side it was not until the sixth innings that the Athletics could even get to 1st base, Martin completely outwitting every man of the nine by his effective pitching, it being finely supported in every position. In the last three innings the Eckfords were allowed to add 10 runs to their score, though but one was earned, the poor support afforded Richardson's pitching being sufficient to discourage any man, five dropped fly balls being conspicuous errors. In the eighth innings, after the first striker had been put out, and the second had narrowly escaped at first base, the third hit a fly ball to Nelson, who held it prettily about three inches from the ground. The base runner, not being the catch, ran to second and Nelson threw to first base to cut him off on the return, but throwing wide, failed in the double play. Martin, however, held the ball at 1st base from Allison before the base runner returned, and therefore the double play was made after all. The umpire not seeing the catch decided the striker not out, and as Richardson then hit a two baser a run was scored, and by a wide throw to 3d by Martin, Richardson got in, Bennett preceding him. Thus were the only 3 runs scored in the game obtained, not a single run being earned in the whole nine innings. Hicks and Nelson bore off the palm in fielding in their positions; Gedney also fielded finely at left field, he making six pretty catches, as did Chapman at right field, Martin doing the best batting. On the other side, Bennett's play at 1st base was noteworthy, and Booth and Hartman made good catches, as also Thake and Wiggins, the latter leading at the bat. It was evidently a bad day for the Athletics, and the very reverse for the Eckfords. The score:—

CHAMPION vs. ACTIVE.

On Tuesday, June 13th, the Active Club, of Newark, N. J., visited the ball field of Jersey City, to play their first game with the Champions, of that "village," and the weather being fine, and a good contest anticipated, quite a large crowd of spectaters gathered to witness it. The Champion club's grounds are free and open to all, but the officers and members of the club see to it that a perfectly fair field is afforded visiting clubs, and keep excellent order, besides affording the members of the press all due accommodations. The game followed in their full strength, and both lacked thorough organization and practice, the players on both sides showing that all of them did not occupy home positions. The ground is of hard, dry sand, quite level and good for fielding, except in spots in the out-field, where it is muddy. The game opened with the Champions at the bat, and bat for errors at third base they would have been disposed of for a single; instead, however, they scored three runs. Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, June 19th, 1871.

TO GET an idea as to how theatrical amusements are progressing in this country, a glance at the advertising columns of the NEW YORK CLIPPER will suffice. In our issue of the 17th nearly two pages were occupied by theatrical cards and business advertisements bearing upon matters connected with the dramatic and show profession generally; which, we believe, has never been equalled in the world except by one London weekly. We take pride in making this statement, because, while efforts had frequently been made to establish a theatrical organ in this country all of them had failed until the CLIPPER took the matter in hand, and, by strict attention to the interests of the profession, by years of patient toil and study, a medium of accommodation for the show people was established; the latter, at once appreciating the convenience and value of this new source of communication, gave it their support and confidence, and assisted thereby in placing it on a firm foundation, until, to-day, it stands alone as the head and front of theatrical journalism. Its value and influence are incalculable, for through its widespread circulation managers and people are brought into almost direct contact without the expense or fatigue of traveling. Actors and actresses, minstrels, variety people, circus performers, singers, dancers, agents, hall proprietors, printers, decorators, scenic artists, musicians, costumers, theatrical goods manufacturers, etc., are brought together, as it were, with every facility afforded them for exchange of notes and the transaction of their various business interests. We say this in no spirit of boasting, but with a certain degree of pride at having succeeded in making a fixed fact what so many had previously ruined themselves in futile attempts to accomplish. Another long needed institution to further the cause of drama was the dramatic agency, and we may fairly to be able to say that this also is now a fixed fact, the extensive patronage bestowed upon the establishments of Col. T. Allston Brown, Harry Cunningham, Riggs & Fitzgerald, T. A. Dow, Davis & Co., G. S. Taurber, and others, affording ample proof of the value of agencies to managers and the profession at large. And yet this feature of the theatrical business may be said to be almost in its infancy, for it is only within the past year or two that this useful business has been systematized, and placed in proper working order; we take pleasure, therefore, in referring to this well-devised auxiliary in the working up of engagements, purchases, and general fitting out of theatres, etc. But if you desire to become fully posted in all the minutiæ of theatricals and show people, study the columns of the CLIPPER and you will soon "know how it is yourself."..... The fashionable churches, like other show places, are getting ready for an early closing movement, with a view to recuperating the divine pastors and repairing the tabernacles in and by which they expound the law and the profits. We have our fair weather christians and our hot weather renegades, and it may appear somewhat singular, nevertheless it is a true fact, that just as soon as the hot weather causes a falling off in the attendance at theatres and minstrel halls, the same thinning out may be observed in the "congregations of the holy." During the spring and early summer, ere it is time to be seen at the watering places, our churches are filled with the "beauty and fashion of the city," but when old Sol sends down his warm regards, religion is forgotten in the general exodus, and pastor and people hie away to the cooling shades of some rural retreat, or go for breakers in "the sad sea waves." And talking about fashion, how rapid are its changes, how inscrutable its decrees. We will give you a few rhymes, by way of illustrating the quick changes daily exhibiting in

THE WORLD OF FASHION.

Friend Sompkins, what causes your hurry?
Do a few minutes we pray?
We fain would have some conversation
With you on this beautiful day.
You seem to be in a great flurry,
As though all your nerves were unstrung;
There surely is nought to occasion
Such haste when the day is still young."
"Nay, comrade, pray do not detain me,"
Said Tomkins as onward he strode,
"I am forced by necessity urgent
To his to my place of abode:
For my wife I have bought a new bonnet,
And quick to my home must repair,
For I'm sadly afraid that the fashion
Will alter before I get there."

.....It has been "Neck and Neck" at the Globe Theatre, but the ex-Spencers were a little too heavy for the place, and the Globe has ceased to exist..... Why Miss Lina Edwin and Mr. Geo. Stuart abdicated their cosy little theatre so early in the season we have not been able to learn, but doubtless "their offence was 'Rank,'" as Mr. Shakespeare once remarked. This is a funny little pleasantry, with the object of making you laugh, but some people are so constituted as to be unable to appreciate anything good but a free lunch..... Now, there's "Our Jim," who, seeing a party of convivial spirits enjoying themselves in a rather free and easy manner, suggested to them that they ought to join the good tremblers—probably meaning Good Templars, although the boy was unconsciously correct. .....And that puts us in mind of something else:—a stage manager was expostulating with one of his supers on the sinful habit of lying with which the supe was grievously troubled, and put in the story of G. Washington and the apple trees in support of his theory that truth and virtue would find their reward. The supernumerary listened to the yarn with due attention, and then exclaimed:—"Well, there's this here about it—if George could 'at He, he must have been hell on the hatchet!".....And just as lofty as George was on the hatchet, other equally truthful scions of a noble house are to be found on other implements of mutilation. We have had in our possession, for many years past, an illustrated copy of Snakespeare, "on which we set great store." We had been studying it at our boarding house, and left it lying on our table while we took a few crumbs of comfort from the frugal fare served out to us by Mrs. Jones the younger. In our absence, a little boy of the tender age of twelve, son of Mrs. Jones the elder, with malice prepense cut all the pictures out of our valuable book. Of course, we were anything but hilarious over the untoward circumstance. The pious youth's indulgent parents attempted to excuse the act on the plea that he had been very little abroad, and that his offence was to be attributed to his innocence. In no sense, however, could it be called innocence, but rather inherent depravity. We, as well as the book, felt rather cut up over the fiendish outrage. Lines onto it:—

CHILDISH PRANKS

Of children's pranks we've had enough,
Or, else we should say, gee whoop!
Of truthful boys, the least that's said
Will to the parents' standing add;
Our Jim," who has been there quite often,
Says people's hearts are apt to soften
When devilish chaps, to hide their crime,
Assume a virtue every time;
And as for that there truthful Georgy,
He was nothing but a youthful forgy,
Who, had he been let loose a while
Would have brought a tear for every smile;
But being caught in his first axe,
(And what I'm telling you is facts)
His parents vowed they'd sooner bust him
Than have a child they could'nt trust him;
And that's the reason George became
A paragon of good, the same.

THE END.

.....And speaking of stars, and the "firmament on high," it has long been known that there are spots on the sun, and many other spots not previously known are discovered by those who take pleasure in watching the phenomena of the starry heavens. On this subject we have received a long letter from an "Anxious Inquirer," asking our views in return. We must just say that we can spare no space for the introduction of such subjects. Astronomy is not in our line; though we do take a note of the movements of stars, those stars are not heavenly bodies; they are professional stars, and of the earth, earthy. Our time is too much occupied with things pertaining to our own planet to give any attention to the spots on the sun's disc, and as every disc-overy by astronomers is duly reported in the scientific journals, and is also orally occasionally delivered on the subject, we must refer our anxious friend to those sources for the information, he is in quest of.....It is a great thing to be a great man, for then you have everything your own way; people bow down to you just as though you were a golden calf, and almost worship the very ring stand upon. We see this exemplified every day; we saw an instance of it this morning:—We entered a store to make a brief purchase, and there beheld quite a number of people standing at the counter, waiting quite a long time before it suited the convenience of the attendants to wait on them; they were of the meek and lowly caste, of course, and didn't matter how much time they lost, but presently in stalked the great Mr. Blank, one of our note-bies, and of great weight in the community. Instantly every salesman "went for him," vieing with each other for the honor of being first to wait on this immense specimen of affluent humanity. Thinks we to ourself, thinks we, it is far better to be wealthy than wise and good, and so say we all.....And talking of money:—

When you pass through a crowd, keep your hand on your gold,
Nor suppose that your destiny is vain,
For if of your purse you relinquish your hold
You may never be sold it again.

.....Likewise, "never go into the water till you know how to swim," which is tantamount to living out of the water forever.....Would it be considered contraband of war to call the performers belonging to the opera house in the Bowery "the sheep of his Pastor?".....Also, is not that vocalist a lay minstrel who is always asking his audience to "put him in his little bed? Or does he so act to bolster himself up as a pillow on the profession?..... Time's up, the foreman of our composing room is shouting, and, as time and tide wait for no man, we'll close our composing draught without more ado.

City Summary.

NOW THAT THE SUMMER SEASON is fairly inaugurated at our various places of amusement, perhaps a few words upon the future prospects may not be out of place. Since the close of the war we have been gradually, but surely drifting back to the status occupied previous to that internecine struggle. The demand for amusement in the summer season is by no means as great as in winter, and the class of patrons differs materially. Two or three theatres on Broadway might possibly be kept open during the entire season with profit, and one or two on the east side of the city. The months of June and July are usually the dullest of the year. Business usually commences to revive early in August, for then the tide of travel from the west to the east sets in, bringing hither scores of merchants, oftimes accompanied by their families, to make their purchases for the fall trade. They are liberal patrons of amusements and their presence makes glad the heart of the manager and ticket seller. Fewer places of amusement, we think, will continue open this summer than has been the case for some years. We have now neither a minstrel troupe nor a variety entertainment open in the city. The business at the theatres now open is but moderate, barely sufficient to cover the running expenses. Lina Edwin's, Bryants' Opera House, San Francisco Hall, the Circus, the Fourteenth Street Theatre, the Theatre Comique, and the Academy of Music are now closed, and, with two exceptions, are likely to remain so until the fall. The exceptions named are Bryants' Opera House, where J. L. Hall, with a provincial company, proposes commencing a brief summer season on July 3d, and San Francisco Hall, where an exhibition of some kind relating to the once brilliant and gay city of Paris is shortly to be opened. Rumors now reach us that Booth's Theatre will close for some weeks after the Fourth of July, that the Grand Opera House, at the expiration of the present engagement, will likewise close. The Globe has collapsed, as will be seen in another item in this department. We shall then have left on Broadway, Wood's Museum, the Fifth Avenue, Wallack's and Niblo's Garden, and as these four cater to distinct tastes we see no reason why they should not be successful. We shall probably have sensational dramas at Wood's Museum; light, airy comedies at the Fifth Avenue; the Lydia Thompson troupe reorganized at Wallack's—commencing August 7th, and Emmet and "Fritz" at Niblo's Garden. We have little faith in provincial actors coming into the city on their own account in the summer, either for creating a sensation or for obtaining the opinions of the metropolitan press upon their merits. They are not familiar with the tastes of the city audiences, nor the routine method of doing business, and failure is pretty certain to ensue. Exhibitions which are easily adapted to small towns where a dearth of amusements exists to that extent that the advent of the obsolete panorama is hailed with delight, will persist in occasionally trying their fortunes in the metropolis, believing that their El Dorado may be found therein. The advertisements and bills attract no attention, and they wonder that New York is so apathetic. Thousands daily pass their gaudily decorated doors not even deigning to turn their heads in that direction, and then with depleted purses and a little more wisdom, they return to the rural districts where the festive peasantry are more easily lured to part with their greenbacks, induced so to do by the illuminated descriptive bills recounting the wonderful success that attended this exhibition during a period of one hundred nights in New York city, and apparently verified by the fulsome puffs alleged to have been re-printed from the leading metropolitan journals, but which, in fact, see the light for the first time upon the bills in question. We, shall, however, from present prospects, be troubled less with the last described than formerly. The managers and actors from all parts of the country will commence arriving in the city to make their arrangements for the coming season, and take a little relaxation after their season's labors, and we have reason to believe that the rotunda of the Metropolitan Hotel will continue, as in years past, to be their favorite resort, for although the hotel proper is not open to the public, the part referred to is finished and open for business, and here will shortly be seen numbers of professionals interchanging courtesies with their city brethren.

OWEN MARLOWE, a popular and favorite actor, is to take a benefit at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, on Monday evening, June 26th, when he will have the assistance of volunteer talent of repute and make his last appearance in this city for some time, as he is engaged to act the coming season in San Francisco, Cal., at the California Theatre. It is expected that Mr. Marlowe's numerous friends will be present, and that the capacity of that theatre will be fully tested.

AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE some further changes have been made in the "Three Hunchbacks." Mr. Winter Ravel has appeared as Harlequin during the past week, and met with much favor from the audiences. He is an excellent dancer, and his acrobatic feats with grace and ease. He may be pronounced one of the best harlequins that has appeared before a New York audience for some years. The Dearden Sisters also made their first appearance there on June 12th, one of whom appeared as Columbine, and the other as a premiere danseuse. They have a comely appearance, and executed a pas de deux overture, arranged by Mr. Henry Tissington, entitled "Miscellaneous Warblings," introducing many of the latest popular airs, has proved quite an attractive feature during the past week. We are happy to state that Mr. John F. Cole, the future manager of the theatre, has retained Mr. Tissington's services, which we are assured will meet with the approbation of both the artists and the public.

THE DENIER AND FOX PANTOMIME TROUPE attracted fair sized audiences to Wood's Museum during the past week, where they performed afternoon and evening in the "Three Blind Mice," of which we have already written, and nothing need now be added beyond saying that all the artists seem to exert themselves to please and the pantomime now acts smoothly and compactly.

ALTHOUGH a change was contemplated in the programme at the Olympic Theatre during the past week, none was made, it being believed that the emotional acting of Miss Lucille Western in the dual role of Lady Isabel and M'me Vine in "East Lynne" would prove as attractive as aught else to the patrons of that theatre. At all events a fair business has been done. "East Lynne" was withdrawn after the evening performance of June 17th to give place this evening to the "Child Stealer," in which Miss Western will appear.

"NO NAME" was announced to be withdrawn from the stage of the FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE after the performance of Monday night, June 19th, having received but thirteen representations. It met with but moderate success, artistically or financially. On Tuesday evening an original comedy from an unannounced author, entitled "Desmondico's; or, Larks Up the Hudson," is advertised to be performed.

A BENEFIT TO THE FAMILY of the late Mr. Dan Symonds is to be given at the Olympic Theatre on the afternoon of Thursday, June 29th, when Messrs. Joseph Jefferson and George L. Fox are announced to appear. It will be remembered that Mr. Symonds was for some time the business manager of this theatre.

AT BOOTH'S THEATRE Mr. Lawrence Barrett continued to act in the "Man O'Airlie" during the past week to fair average attendance. It is rumored that it is the intention of the management to play stars during the next season, and among those said to be already engaged are John E. Owens, Joseph Jefferson, Miss Maggie Mitchell, Miss Lotta and others. Mr. Booth will act during a brief portion of the season. We sincerely trust that a good stock company will be secured.

"THE LONG STRIKE," an effective play by Dion Boucicault, well known to the theatre-going public, is to be re-produced at Wallack's Theatre on Wednesday evening, June 21st. Mr. Stoddart's impersonation of Moneypenny is a strongly marked artistic portraiture, and on that account we presume the selection has been made. "Rosedale" has attracted good sized audiences during the past week, and will be performed on Monday and Tuesday evenings of the present week.

THE SEASON AT THE GLOBE THEATRE terminated ingloriously on Friday evening, June 16th. The last performance of "Neck and Neck," in which Mr. E. T. Stetson was playing the leading role, took place on Thursday evening. On Wednesday evening some of the performers declined to play unless their salaries were paid—none having been paid since the commencement of the dramatic season—and a compromise was effected by which the performance was given. On Thursday, upon the artists enquiring for the manager, they were informed "he had gone to Jersey." Out of favor to Mr. Stetson the company agreed to play on Thursday and Friday evenings, but upon presenting themselves on the latter evening at the theatre they found it closed, and they were refused admission. Only a short time since this theatre, then run as a variety hall under the management of S. K. and A. R. Spencer, closed suddenly, owing various performers their salaries. The dramatic season was inaugurated on June 5th, under the management of A. R. Spencer, with the result above recorded. We improve the present opportunity to denounce, emphatically, the practice of any party or parties opening theatres without possessing the means of fulfilling their contracts. The members of the profession labor hard and conscientiously for their salaries, and, as a general thing, are not very good business people. The fact that a party has a theatre they consider prima facia evidence of said party's ability to fulfill their contracts. If theatres are to be managed upon the principle of paying its liabilities if the receipts warrant, and the reverse if not, it would be better for the artists to become their own managers, for if profit did accrue they would reap the benefit of the whole of it! Between fifteen and twenty artists have acted at the Globe Theatre for thirteen performances, and the majority of them have received no compensation for their labor. They have their liabilities to discharge, and landladies are not in the habit of receiving in payment of board and lodging the excuse that the manager did not pay salaries. We trust that in the future the names of irresponsible managers will be remembered and that artists will decline engagements under such management.

"PAUL CLIFFORD," a musical drama in three acts, adapted from Bulwer's novel of that name, was produced at Niblo's Garden, on Monday evening, June 12th, with the following cast:—

Paul Clifford	John Collins
Long Ned	C. C. Boalisce
Scarlet Jack	C. A. Malcolm
Dr. Slopperton	J. Andrews
Dammie Dunnaker	C. H. Morton
Sir William Brandon	J. Foster
Augustus Tomlinson	S. B. Duffield
Lord Mauleverer	T. C. Howard
Dennis O'Hoolahan	J. W. Brutone
Lucy Brandon	Miss E. Howson
Tervaichore Slopperton
Mrs. Dr. Slopperton	Beatie Sudlow
Lucy	Mrs. A. Hind
Sallie Rosemary	Miss F. Burt
Mrs. Margery Lovekins	Mrs. J. Brutone

Some excellent scenery had been freshly painted for it by W. Voegtlin, and to give effect to the music a chorus had been specially engaged. The performance of Monday evening may be considered nothing more than a dress rehearsal. Confusion reigned supreme. Many of the artists were faulty in the text and the business of the play. The scenery was badly managed, and the impression created by the entire performance was anything but favorable. However, in the succeeding representations a marked improvement was noticeable, and on Friday it was acted quite smoothly, and under the circumstances we prefer to speak of it as it was performed on that occasion. Mr. Collins, who made his appearance after a long absence, upon the metropolitan boards, begins to show the marks of age both in his singing and acting. In the former his voice is uncertain, and some changes were made in consequence in the songs introduced in his role. On the evening in question he sang "Believe me if all those endearing young charms" so well that he was rewarded with a hearty encore. Long Ned was well acted by G. C. Boniface, who was careful and correct. Scarlet Jack was played with spirit by C. A. Malcolm, who sang, and is a pleasing manner, several songs, and created a determination of appearing on Uncle Mehnotte. The evening appointed for the second performance is Thursday, the 22d inst., and the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, is again to be the "scene of operations."

FROM CINCINNATI our correspondent furnishes the following intelligence up to the 16th:—"Pike's new opera house was formally inaugurated on Monday evening, 12th, by the Fisk opera bouffe troupe, and the beautiful temple had a brilliant opening, as every seat in the house seemed filled and rows of gentlemen were standing outside the circle of seats. Last week's CLIPPER gave such a minute description of the building that little more can be added. The arch in front of the curtain is certainly the most gorgeous I have ever seen, far exceeding that of the former opera house. The two proscenium boxes are elegantly fitted up in pale yellow satin, and over each stand two life-size female statues, bearing lighted candelabra. Still above these, and in the centre, is a similar smaller figure. The stage, and indeed the hall, are a cosy size, and the theatre seems admirably adapted to hearing. The scenery showed well, having all been painted by Joseph Piggott, some years ago artist of the National. One excellent point in the hall is the facility for egress. Half a dozen wide doors on the side of the house open into a broad, stone paved corridor, from which there are three wide stairways leading to the street. The chairs are all of iron frames, with seats that fold up and are very comfortable. The frescoing is admirable, and was executed by F. Pedretti, of this city. The same may be observed of the carving, which was the work of Henry L. Fry, of this city, and the gilding by E. Wisewell. At the close of the second act Mr. Pike was called before the curtain and forced into a speech, which he rendered happily, though he was obviously embarrassed. He mentioned that the whole transformation of the plain music hall into the elaborate opera house had been done in less than seven weeks. This work involved an entire rebuilding of everything save the balcony and gallery. The latter does not entirely circle the hall, as is usual in theatres, but is only a half circle in the back part. The opera itself (Les Brigands) went off with considerable eclat, as the audience was in rather an enthusiastic mood. The orchestra was excellent and the chorus about the best we have had here with a bouffe troupe. Silly, Persini and Gaudins had the leading roles. Silly, though of very fair voice, does not have the roistering abandon of Tostee or Irma, and made only a tolerable impression. Persini had dash enough in her petite body, and won favor rapidly. Gaudins did not have sufficient in his role to gauge him, and made a much better impression on Wednesday and Thursday in 'La Perichole.' Duchesne, who personated the Lieutenant of Brigands, has been here before, and is very good. The house fell off considerably on Tuesday evening, but brushed up some on Wednesday, when Aimee appeared as 'La Perichole.' She is a veritable little bouffer, and her success has been very decided. Her rendition of the drunken song, in the first act, was thrice encored each evening. Last night there was only a fair house, though the weather is just now pleasantly cool. A capital ballet divertissement has been given each evening by Albertina, Antonino, Ricci, G. Mazzeri, Rose and L. Mazzeri. After the ballet last evening (Thursday), female screams were heard from behind the scenes, which created quite a sensation in the audience. The affair was quickly hushed up, but, as I learn, was occasioned by one of the fair dancers getting jealous of a rival, and 'going for her,' tooth and nail, particularly nail. Mons. Lix is prominently billed, but does not appear. 'Barbe Bleue' is to be given this evening (Friday), 'La Grande Duchesse' for to-morrow's matinee, and 'Les Brigands' in the evening. The company had intended to remain two weeks, and even longer, if business justified, but will now hardly stay more than the two..... The Melville mentioned in my last report as having tricked members of Wood's company is Mr. Wash. T. Melville..... It is reported that John Robinson is about to commence immediately the erection of a large amphitheatre on the corner of Ninth and Plum streets. He bought the lot some time since with that intention, but, so far, has done nothing."

THE GAYLOR-EMMET SUIT.—We cut the following from the Terre Haute, Ind., Evening Gazette:—"The author of 'Our Fritz,' Mr. Gaylor, we understand, has brought suit against J. K. Emmet, the actor, at Milwaukee, for alleged damages sustained by the said Gaylor, because of the conduct of the said Emmet being of such a nature at various times and sundry places as to cause the said Gaylor to lose money in large sums. The plaintiff has written to this city for evidence of Emmet's conduct here, including copies of the Terre Haute Daily Gazette, in which we published an expose of the disgraceful actions of Emmet while in our city. We hear that Mr. Gaylor while here that he had lost not less than $5,000 through the fault of Emmet, not as an actor, but in other respects."

FRANK E. AIKEN'S DRAMATIC COMPANY performed in Fort Madison, Iowa, June 12th; Keokuk, 13th and 14th; Quincy, Ill., 15th and 16th; and is billed to perform in Springfield, 21st and 22d, and Decatur, 23d and 24th.

THE PRINCIPAL MEMBERS of the Dramatic Company from McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill., played in Burlington, Iowa, June 13th, 14th and 15th; and are announced to commence a brief season in Quincy, Ill., on the 19th.

MR. CHARLES MATHEWS, supported by the artists of the Globe Theatre, Boston, Mass., is billed to play the present week in Providence, R. I.

MISS SUE ROBINSON, a favorite actress in California for some years past, and who had been engaged for McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill., for the ensuing season, died in Sacramento, Cal., June 17th.

BURLESQUE TROUPES or other companies giving a full entertainment, are wanted to play on sharing terms, at the Royal Lyceum, Toronto, Canada, and singing people are advertised for, for the coming season.

G. K. FORTESQUE, first low comedian and burlesque artist, who has been engaged by the Wallace Sisters' for the coming season, is prepared to accept engagements during the summer. His address is care of this office.

KATE PENNOYER, danseuse and pantomimist, can be engaged for the fall and winter season. Address as per advertisement.

MARY L. BENELL, first old woman, can be engaged for the fall and winter. Her address is care of this office.

H. A. KENDALL, first old man, can be addressed as per advertisement.

A DRAMATIC COMPANY is wanted for the new Opera House, Providence, R. I., and the New England cities. Address Messrs. Henderson & Lowell, as per card elsewhere.

THE GENTLEMEN engaged by McKean Buchanan for the next season are requested to address him up to July 1st at the Hot Springs, Arkansas.

MR. SOL. SMITH, JR., and Miss Sedley Brown were united in marriage at Chicago, Ill., on June 10th.

MISS JANE COOMBS and her dramatic troupe are billed to appear at the Pittsburgh Opera House, Pittsburgh, Pa., or one week, commencing on the 19th inst.

ALFRED DUSSON can be engaged for old men and character business through Col. T. A. Brown.

THE SEASON at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, came to a termination on the 17th inst., the last night of the two weeks' engagement of Joseph Jefferson, in "Rip Van Winkle." The season just terminated was commenced August 20th, 1870, with Boucicault's drama of the "Flying Scud." During the season just closed the following star played engagements at this theatre:—Mr. Edwin Forrest, Miss Lucille Western, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watkins, Mr. John S. Clarke, Mr. Edwin Booth, Miss Leona Cavender, Mr. Edwin Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams, Miss Ella Burns, Mrs. D. P. Bowers and Mr. Joseph Jefferson. The new pieces produced for the first time at this theatre, during the season, included "Fox and Geese," "Rose Michel," "Dundreary's Wife," "No Escape," "The Great City," "Minnie's Luck," the "Three Hunchbacks," and "Twixt Axe and Crown."

"RANK" received its final representation at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on Saturday evening, the 17th inst., after a not very successful run of two weeks. Miss Lina Edwin and her company exerted themselves to the utmost to render "Rank" a success in a pecuniary point of view, but the unusual heat of the past two weeks prevented them reaping the reward of their efforts. Miss Lina Edwin, by her prepossessing appearance, graceful action and pleasing voice, confirms the favorable opinions formed by the audiences of other cities. The Arch Street Theatre will remain closed for a short season.

THE DRAMA OF "THE OCTOROON" seemed to afford satisfaction to the audiences during the last week at Simpson's Museum, Philadelphia. The success of the drama met with is mainly due to the excellent acting of Messrs. G. D. Chaplin and Harry Hawk, the dramatic ability of the former causing the part of Jacob McCloskey to stand out with remarkable effect, and the Salem Scudder of Harry Hawk being marked by many touches of genuine humor. The "Octoroon" was shelved on the 17th inst., and the remaining portion of the engagement of the week will consist of the "Maniac Lover," "The Stranger" and "The Rough Diamond," in which the Arabian Giant—who made his first appearance here last week—will sustain the part of Cousin Joe. The drama of "The Sea of Ice" will shortly be produced.

AMUSEMENTS IN CHICAGO, Ill., are thus commented upon by our correspondent, who wrote on June 16 h:—The Wyndham comedy company are meeting with success at the Dearborn Theatre this, their second week. The comedy of 'Caste' still retains the boards, and from present indications there will be no change in the bill for the present, though the comedy of 'Home,' with entire new scenery and appointments, is announced for an early production. Of the acting of the company during the current week we can say nothing new that has already been said. Miss Annie Goodall and Miss Compton are both connected with the company, but have not appeared as yet..... Miss Jane Coombs commenced her second and last week at the Opera House on the 12th, appearing as Pauline in 'The Lady of Lyons,' to an audience considerably increased in point of numbers, over that of last week. Since my last, there has been a marked improvement in the boards, and Miss Coombs' rendering of Pauline, Miss Coombs, who has shown herself—during her limited engagement in this city—to be an artiste of superior merit. Miss Coombs' Lady Teazle, Lady Constance, Pauline and Lady Gay Spanker are among the very best personations ever witnessed in this city. Mr. Robinson has rendered her excellent support thus far, enacting the roles of Charles Surface, Claude Melnotte and Wildrake in a style that was highly commendable. Mr. Bradley has generally been successful in his various assignments, his Col. Damas and Sir Wm. Pondicr's acting among his most satisfactory impersonations. Mrs. M. A. Wilkins has shown herself to be an excellent actress, and has created a lasting impression. Mrs. Anna Lanagan is also a remarkably clever and painstaking actress, and has displayed some really meritorious acting upon more than one occasion. During this week the plays of 'The School for Scandal,' 'Love's Sacrifice,' 'London Assurance,' 'Romeo and Juliet' and 'Love's Chase,' have been repeated. Saturday evening the 'Hunchback' will be presented for the first time..... Miss Katie Putnam, supported by a company, nearly all of whom have been connected with Aiken's Museum the past season, commenced a six weeks' engagement at Hooley's Opera House, on Monday evening last. There was only a fair audience present the first night, and the attendance since has not been as large as could be wished, which is undoubtedly owing to the unfortunate selection of the play of 'Fanchon' as the opening piece. Miss Putnam is succeeding splendidly, however, and barring her crudeness, which is at times quite noticeable, her personation of Fanchon is surprisingly good. She is being well supported by J. W. Blaisdell, who makes an admirable Landry; Edwin Browne, a perfectly satisfactory Didier; J. W. Jennings, a highly acceptable Father Barbeaud; Mrs. Mary McWilliams, a passable Fadet, and Josie Hight, a pleasing Madelon. Owen Fawcett as Father Calliard has an unimportant part, which affords no scope for acting. Mr. Blaisdell and Miss Putnam's reception on the opening night amounted to almost an ovation, and they were called before the curtain during the performance. On the 19th the new play entitled 'Sam Scudi,' written expressly for Miss Putnam, is to be produced..... Wood's Museum will be opened on June 19th by Signor Blitz for a short season."

JOHN L. HALL'S ADELPHI BURLESQUE COMPANY performed in Belfast, Me., three nights, commencing June 15th.

MISS LINA EDWIN and her New York company are advertised to appear at the Academy of Music, Pittsburgh, Pa., on June 21st and 22d. The comedy of "Rank" will be presented on both occasions.

GOODRICH'S DRAMATIC CONSTELLATION performed in Ansonia, Conn., June 12th. The performance was for the benefit of the Catholic Church under the charge of the Rev. Father Dwyer. P. P.

MANY FRIENDS who were latterly amused with Mr. John S. Bettin's performance of "Romeo," at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on the evening of the 5th inst., may be glad to hear that another burlesque is in store for them. Mr. Bettin, unsurpassed by the unfavorable criticisms of the Philadelphia press, has announced his determination of appearing as Uncle Mehnotte. The evening appointed for this second performance is Thursday, the 22d inst., and the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, is again to be the "scene of operations."

FROM CINCINNATI our correspondent furnishes the following intelligence up to the 16th:—"Pike's new opera house was formally inaugurated on Monday evening, 12th, by the Fisk opera bouffe troupe, and the beautiful temple had a brilliant opening, as every seat in the house seemed filled and rows of gentlemen were standing outside the circle of seats. Last week's CLIPPER gave such a minute description of the building that little more can be added. The arch in front of the curtain is certainly the most gorgeous I have ever seen, far exceeding that of the former opera house. The two proscenium boxes are elegantly fitted up in pale yellow satin, and over each stand two life-size female statues, bearing lighted candelabra. Still above these, and in the centre, is a similar smaller figure. The stage, and indeed the hall, are a cosy size, and the theatre seems admirably adapted to hearing. The scenery showed well, having all been painted by Joseph Piggott, some years ago artist of the National. One excellent point in the hall is the facility for egress. Half a dozen wide doors on the side of the house open into a broad, stone paved corridor, from which there are three wide stairways leading to the street. The chairs are all of iron frames, with seats that fold up and are very comfortable. The frescoing is admirable, and was executed by F. Pedretti, of this city. The same may be observed of the carving, which was the work of Henry L. Fry, of this city, and the gilding by E. Wisewell. At the close of the second act Mr. Pike was called before the curtain and forced into a speech, which he rendered happily, though he was obviously embarrassed. He mentioned that the whole transformation of the plain music hall into the elaborate opera house had been done in less than seven weeks. This work involved an entire rebuilding of everything save the balcony and gallery. The latter does not entirely circle the hall, as is usual in theatres, but is only a half circle in the back part. The opera itself (Les Brigands) went off with considerable eclat, as the audience was in rather an enthusiastic mood. The orchestra was excellent and the chorus about the best we have had here with a bouffe troupe. Silly, Persini and Gaudins had the leading roles. Silly, though of very fair voice, does not have the roistering abandon of Tostee or Irma, and made only a tolerable impression. Persini had dash enough in her petite body, and won favor rapidly. Gaudins did not have sufficient in his role to gauge him, and made a much better impression on Wednesday and Thursday in 'La Perichole.' Duchesne, who personated the Lieutenant of Brigands, has been here before, and is very good. The house fell off considerably on Tuesday evening, but brushed up some on W

the 17th inst., after a successful engagement. The other features of the entertainment were a burlesque, with the name of "The Naked Boy from the Cemetery," and the laughable sketches of "Lazy Dick," "The Scotch Minstrel," and "The Black Pantaloon," the performances being wound up with the farcical sketch of "Mistaken Identity." Alfred Aiello, acrobatic vocalist, and Miss Fannie Franks, comic vocalist, make their re-appearance at this establishment on Monday, the 26th inst. Mr. Joseph M. Morticello, the manager of this establishment, has been tendered a complimentary benefit, which will take place on Monday, the 26th inst. A large number of volunteers will appear, and the beneficiaire will make his first appearance in three years in some of his original banjo solos.

SAM CARLTON, stump orator and general performer, and Billy Gunaven, song and dance man, can be addressed as per advertisement.

A LADY VOCALIST and a male clog dancer are wanted by E. O. Rogers, who advertises.

THE ALHAMBRA VARIETIES, ELIZABETH, N. J., was opened for a summer season on June 2d, with the following chief performers:—George Buckley, Hank West, Ike Lewis, C. Hutchings, Master Willie, J. Eckens, Kos de Forrest, Emma Mord, Fanny Lewis and Ida Clarke.

MARY DENVER'S VARIETIES and Sam Sanford's Opera Troupe closed a brief season in Frankford, Pa., June 14th. It is their intention to close their traveling season on July 4th.

AT SHIER'S OPERA HOUSE, East Saginaw, Mich., Farron and Baker, the California Dutch comiques, put in an appearance on June 16th, and Mlle A. Fontainbleau, lady gymnast, was announced for June 19th. Gymnasts and other talent can find engagements by addressing as per advertisement.

THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Montreal, Canada, will be opened about July 1st. Artists are wanted. Address Fred Rogers, as per card elsewhere.

METROPOLITAN HALL, Washington, D. C., at the present writing, says our correspondent, is darling June 16th:—"In the city, and as a result a goodly share of currency nightly falls into the coffers of the smiling manager, who very sensibly acts as treasurer for his own establishment. Johnny Reese terminated his engagement on the 17th, as did also the charming Belle Graham, and Ione Lang, who, by the way, desires to be known henceforth as Millie Ione. Johnny Smith, banjoist and end performer; Mollie Somers and Mazori Arnoldi were the new faces on the 12th. On the evening following, Mr. Smith so far forgot himself as to indulge rather copiously in the exhilarating fluid, and the result was, a fine of $5 was levied upon him. The accomplished Kiraly Sisters, Hungarian dancers, open an engagement on the 19th inst., and Robert Nickle, the famous magician, commences early in July. Ned O'Baldwin, the Irish Giant, was in town last week for the purpose of giving an exhibition, but as his agent was not successful in obtaining a hall, he called on Manager Henze, of the Metropolitan, to arrange for a short engagement. The agent wanted $100 per night, and as that was thought to be entirely too steep, he fix'd $25, but that left the figure still too high, and so an engagement was not effected. Harry Jones, the vigilant officer of the Metropolitan, and Billy Brown, a former outsider, have shown their handiwork by erecting on the ceiling of the Metropolitan moveable fans of huge dimensions, the swaying to and fro of which keeps the state of the atmosphere at an agreeable temperature."

VARIETY NEWS IN ST. LOUIS, Mo., is thus reported by our correspondent, who wrote on June 16th:—"At the Varieties Theatre the most noticeable events since my last communication have been the appearances of Rollin Howard, who left the San Francisco Minstrels when here, Charley Sturges, comedian, and Andy McKee, the eccentric song and dance man, all of whom were well received. Rollin Howard and Charley Sturges appeared in a musical act entitled 'Hunting a Prima Donna,' which was well rendered, Rollin Howard's song, in imitation of Nilsson, 'Way Down Upon the Swanee River,' calling rapturously encored. He afterwards met with favor by singing a serio-comic song entitled 'Little Miss Skillet.' Sturges and Grant have created much mirth in 'Let Me Be,' now in its second week, and Charley Sturges performed an original song and dance, written for him by Rollin Howard, called 'Little Belle,' which was heartily applauded. Sig. Constantine, the pantomimist, still remains and continues to produce his side splitting pantomimes and beautiful ballets. Miss Nellie Taylor is here yet and has become an established favorite, as is the case with Hannah Birch. E. M. Hall, the favorite banjo player and accomplished gentleman, has closed, and joins the Emerson Minstrels. Sidney Franks and Emma Alford played quite a successful two weeks' engagement, ending June 17th. Gen. Grant, Jr., the miniature song and dance man, is still here. The whole people, besides Geo. W. Thompson and the dramatic company, appear this week in a splendid bill, which concludes with the romantic drama, in two acts, entitled 'Rafaelle, the Reprobate,' with Mr. G. W. Thompson in the title role, assisted in other characters by W. J. Stanton, Hi Chapman, Miss Kate Morris, Hannah Birch, Marie Legross and others. Business is good. The Sangreda gymnasts are engaged to appear at this house week after next. Mr. Thompson, the able and energetic stage manager, has in active preparation 'Cartouche, the Highwayman of Paris.'..... At Scott's New Varieties La Belle Blanche, vocalist, and Johnny Nichols, comedian, are the newest attractions. Lulu Cullum, Tommy Carey and Johnny Buckbin have been added to the company since my last letter; both are well received. Pete Harrington, the famous banjoist, has comic songs, as does Nellie Belmont. Kitty Whitland is doing well. The Mabille Can-can now closes the evening's performances. Nellie Belmont appears as Frailty and Dora St. Leon as the Foses Plastique. Tom Clannon has closed his engagement, but is still in town..... Joe Henry's Sixth Street Varieties is running to good houses, with a good company. Millie Somers, lady banjoist and song and dance; Delia Smith, the 'Active Gal,' and Robert Frayne, oriental juggler, are the latest additions, having opened last week. Dan Sprague, a very good clog and song and dance performer, leaves this week. Ettie Barker and Joe Woods, two good people, are received with much favor. Nellie Zegriuo's songs receive considerable applause, and the young lady has become quite a favorite. Frank Mack does some very fine songs and dances, and Billy Pash provokes much enthusiasm by his banjo solos. The Can-can still holds its own here with Ettie Barker as Frailty.....At Allen's Varieties, there are two new additions to chronicle, consisting of Johnny Max, Dutch comedian, and Annie Forrester, vocalist. Mel Rogers and Johnny Murphy continue on the ends. La Petite Hensley is still well received in her excellent songs and dances. This week she is doing a dance with Lizzie Florence. Billy Fleming, song and dance performer, is still in the company. Miss Nina Dubois, vocalist, and Senorita Philomena, song and dance artist, have closed. While in their closing week the stage manager, Mr. Roper, put in their hands the handsome sum of twenty-four dollars and fifty cents, which has been the subject of much remark among the variety people of the city."

"SMITH'S OPERA HOUSE, East Saginaw, Mich., continues to be well patronized," writes our correspondent, under date of June 18th, adding "the management is using every means to make it a popular place of amusement. The company at present consists of the following artists:—Bones, Frank Wilson; tambo, George Primrose; interlocutor and stage manager, G. Brooks Clark; Messrs. Billy De Vere, Bobby McKown, Frank Benton, and the Misses Mollie Sutherland, Annie Sherwood, Zella Renard, Lou Francis, Annie Leslie, Fannie Ford and Clara Wallace. The following are billed to appear soon:—Pete Baker and Deco. Farrow, in Dutch and Irish comicalities, and Miss Rosa Finkelman, female gymnast, who appears in a "Leap for Life" and the flying trapeze."

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Bay City, Mich., Carroll & Elliott, proprietors, the following talent entertain large and appreciative audiences nightly:—Miss Lottie Harris, a charming premiere danseuse and vocalist; Charles Watson, comic singer; J. H. Clark, George Kurtz, J. McDonald, Miss Maud La Mone, Miss Sallie Rogers and Miss Annie West. This place is becoming quite popular, the proprietors being monied men, who endeavor to procure the best talent possible for the stage. So wrote our correspondent on June 15th.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF JOHNNIE WARD, a variety entertainment was given at Her Majesty's Theatre, Ottawa, Ont., on June 15th, when the following artists appeared: Al West, stump orator; Billy Mack, dance; Alfred Woodruff, ballad singer and guitarist; James Adams, ballad singer and concertina; F. Boners, leader of orchestra, and the beneficiary, Johnnie Ward.

COOL BURGESS, the Misses Sallie and Julia Holman, and Charles J. Miers, character vocalist, are billed to perform in London, Ont., June 20th and 21st; Sarnia, 22d; Port Huron, 23d, and Sauk, 24th.

TONY FARRON and his variety company, from his opera house, New York City, is billed to perform in Newport, R. I., June 26th; Taunton Mass., 27th; Fall River, 28th; New Bedford, 29th; Salem, 30th, and Lynn, July 1st.

BROWN AND SANFORD, gymnasts and trapeze performers, were the new appearances at the Front Street Theatre Comique, Baltimore, Md., during the past week.

AT THE BALTIMORE, Md., OPERA HOUSE, a summer season is to be commenced on June 26th. A call of the company for rehearsal will be found in our advertising columns.

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., is progressing finely under the new management, and bids fair for a successful summer season. Among the new appearances the past week were the Misses Louie Ingersoll, Millie Hall and Ida Belle Ida, Master Willie Wheeler, Joseph Purdy and L. J. Donelle. In the first part Ed Obrissie and J. Purdy are excellent, and their songs and gags are fresh and pleasing. Miss Butler sings an excellent ballad, which is deservedly encored. Miss Irving and Miss Bertha's ballads are pleasingly rendered. Master Wheeler's song and dance is hardly up to the mark. The sketcher of the "Photograph Gallery," by Obrissie, Purdy and Donelle, is well worked up, causing much laughter. Moll and Worley, in a double song and dance, "Den I Was Gone," are excellent. Miss Ida's ballad, "Out in the Snow," is sweetly sung and is effective. The concluding piece of "The Irish Emigrant" is creditably acted by Frank Frayne, as Tim O'Brien, and Ed Obrissie, Misses Clara Butler and Bertha in favorite characters. The attendance continues good and everything is serene. So wrote our correspondent on June 16th.

MILLIE TURNOUR, female gymnast, advertises that she is at liberty to accept engagements until September.

S. K. SPENCER'S GLOBE THEATRE COMBINATION, under the management of William Foote, Jr., opened at the Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 12th inst., to a full house, and the attendance has been encouraging. Milburn's songs and changes are regarded with more favor than on his previous visit. Fannie and Addie Deardon are clever danseuses and are accorded encores nightly. Morrissey and Emerson are especial favorites, and they are obliged to repeat their songs and dances several times every night. Orville Pitcher's "Characteristic Illustrations" are an enjoyable feature and Sam Cole's negrolems are duly appreciated. Clara Burton's dancing receives, as it deserves, warm and hearty applause. She is an admirable jigger. Larry Tooley's Dutch impersonations are entirely satisfactory. In addition to those named Charles A. Gardner, George W. Herman and Billy Carter appear nightly in their specialties. The Spencer Combination remains next week. Fleshmonger, the regular stage manager of the Varieties Theatre, is underlined for a benefit soon. It is to be hoped that the attendance may be large, as he has proved himself a most satisfactory stage manager since he has been with us. So wrote our correspondent on June 19th.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Cleveland, O., among the attractions of the past week were the Misses Lucy Adams, character songs and dances; Lizzie Mitchell, dancer; Annie W. Hill, club swinger; Fannie Vaiade, serio-comic; Emma Marsh, dancer; the Laurence Troupe, in classic statuary; Frank Wood, in song and dance; M. B. Skinner, Philopine comedian; Tom Hall, song and dance. Miss Lucy Adams received a farewell benefit on June 16th. Robert Percy, aerial gymnast, and the Jerome Family were underlined for an appearance on June 19th.

THE ARMSTRONG BROTHERS, cloggists and flute soloists, were the fresh attractions at the Front Street Theatre Comique, Baltimore, Md., during the past week.

AT THE BALTIMORE, Md., OPERA HOUSE, a summer season is to be commenced on June 26th. A call of the company for rehearsal will be found in our advertising columns.

THE OLYMPIC VARIETIES is the only place of amusement now open in New Orleans, La. Among the principal performers there during the past week were Laura Webb, Dora Compton, Dora Doran, Gertrude Banks, Lillie Wheeler, Tommy Warfield, Joe Templeton, Master Frank Rivers, J. C. Rivers and Billy Kirby.

THE VARIETIES, Peoria, Ill., writes our correspondent on June 16th, "has changed hands. Messrs. Thompson and Schultz being now the business managers, with Mr. Clark Wells as stage manager. The following people now compose the company:—Miss Emma Merton, Annie Williams and Miss Mary Olive; Bob Linley, Burgess Bros. Master Willie and C. H. Laporte. Billy Boyd, bone soloist, cloggist, and J. Clark, Dutch comedian, appeared this evening and were well received. Thompson and Schultz took a joint benefit on the 16th, and standing room was at a premium. Johnny Doolittle has been re-engaged and will make his first appearance on the 26th. Miss Moon has closed her engagement and will take a short rest. No one, since the Varieties opened, has given such universal satisfaction as the clever lady, and the patrons will hear of her re-engagement with pleasure."

THE BROOKLYN OPERA HOUSE, Brooklyn, L. I., is announced to be opened as a variesties theatre, on June 19th, under the management of C. O. White, with the following company:—J. H. Milburn, Miss ANNIE HINDLE, James Mack, Charles Kissin, Bryne O'Lynn, James Rooney, James W. Clark, Eddie Brady and the Hilbertian Boys, Conner and Bradley, the Harrison Sisters, Miss Kate Sharp, Miss Frank Christy, and Alice Hamilton, in her songs, dances, &c.

THE LAWRENCE TROUPE, with Lucy Adams, serio-comic vocalist, at present performing at the Theatre Comique, Cleveland, Ohio, advertise that they would like to join a traveling company after June 26th.

BUTLER AND GILMORE'S VARIETY TROUPE, from the Theatre Comique, New York city, is reported by our various correspondents as having done a good business in the New England cities during the past week, their route having been published in our past issue. This evening, June 19th, they commence a season of four weeks at the Boston Theatre, Boston, Mass.

THE NOVELTY THEATRE, Titusville, Pa., under the management of John Dozier, was opened on June 12th with the following company:—Miss Maggie Willett, vocalist and actress; Emma Jackson, actress; Mlle. Emma, dancer; Pensley and Fitzgerald, clog dancers; Mike Foley, song and dance; J. V. Melton, actor; J. H. Rogers, comedian; J. W. Sandford, dancer, and T. G. Canham, leader of orchestra. L. F. Roys commenced an engagement on June 17th, acting in the "Poacher's Doom."

HENRY EVERSON, the young American comique, is advertised to give an entertainment in Birmingham, Mich., June 19th, consisting of his songs with quick changes, assisted by D. Clinton Price, vocalist and guitarist, and Prof. W. Bendix's orchestra.

THE WALNUT STREET COMPANY, after a tour through Kansas, have returned to their old quarters in Kansas City, for the summer season, wrote our correspondent, on June 14th:—"The theatre has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired, and looks very neat. The blondes are the leading attraction, with Quinn on the bone end, and Childs on the tambo. A very pleasing olio followed, in which the little favorite, Ada Boshell, gave her grand pas seul; Jimmy Quinn, in his usual funny sketches; Celia Iferd, in her budget of songs; Joe Childs, in his great clog dance; Troubles With the Orchestra," by Hen. Mason; Geo. Wilson and Ada Boshell, in their favorite song and dance, 'Where the Flowers Blush and Bloom,' and an overture by Thos. Williams and orchestra. The entertainment concluded with the laughable farce of 'The Midnight Elopement.'"

CONCERNING VARIETY NEWS IN CINCINNATI, our correspondent on the 16th, writes:—"There is very little to say about variety biz., save that it is a little more lively than last week. At the Race Street Theatre, Miss Chrissie Morrell, who was to have left, has been re-engaged. Lizzie Nelson, a deserving member of the company, made up for a benefit to-night and will have several volunteers. Marsh Adams this week is repeating his clever act, 'Old Black Joe.' An amusing farce, 'Outside and Inside,' is rendered by Mill Barlow and Mr. and Mrs. McAvoy, and the farce of 'Doodles' is also given, with Mr. and Mrs. McAvoy as Mr. and Mrs. Doodles, Barlow as George Acorn, Adams as Parson Acorn, Golden City; Miss Lizzie Whelan as Charles Fenton and Chrissie Worrell as Mary Acorn. Between these are sandwiched the usual mixture of songs, dances and eccentric acts, none of which are noticeably novel. The company has been cut down this week, Mlle Emma, Miss Pattie Jerome and Masters Wally and Tommy Jerome, the clever boy cloggists, having retired.....The harm's in Germantown have given in on the Sunday question, at least for the present. None of them gave entertainments last Sunday, and unless the Aldermen repeal the obnoxious laws, they will have to submit until the next election comes around."

Negro Minstrelsy.

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS have returned from a short traveling season to Philadelphia, but they will not resume their performances in that city until next August.

SIMMONS AND SLOCUM'S MINSTRELS begin a season of one and probably two weeks at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, on the 26th. On July 17th Manning's party open for two weeks in the same house, after the 24th Kooley's Minstrels commence at Mozart Hall, Cincinnati.

BEN BROWN, general performer, joined Cal Wagner's Minstrels at St. Louis, Mo., on May 27th.

SIMMONS & SLOCUM'S MINSTRELS commence a four nights' engagement at Weisiger Hall, Louisville, Ky., on July 6th.

J. H. CLARKE, at present sojourning in Bay City, Mich., is about reorganizing the New Orleans Minstrels, which will start out about October 1st. He is now having built a magnificent band chariot at a cost of nearly one thousand dollars.

MIKE RENTZ'S FEMALE MINSTRELS performed in Searsport, Me., June 12th; Camden, 13th; Rockland, 14th; Thomaston, 15th; thence they were to have gone by steamer from Portland, Me., direct to Yarmouth, N. S., opening there on June 20th for three nights. They intend making a two months' tour through the British Provinces, returning to the states during the latter part of August.

DUPREZ AND BENEDICT'S minstrels performed in Peoria, Ill., June 13th and 14th, and are billed to appear in Decatur, 21st; Springfield, 23d and 24th.

HOWARD & ARLINGTON'S MINSTRELS performed in Albany, N. Y., during the past week, and are billed to play in Schenectady the 12th.

CAL WAGNER'S MINSTRELS played in Leavenworth, Kansas, June 12th.

LILLIAN ROGERS' FEMALE MINSTRELS and Brass Band are billed to perform in Rochester, N. Y., July 4th; Victor, 5th; Canandaigua, 6th; Geneva, 7th, and Waterloo, 8th. The company consists of Lillie Rogers, May Browning, Ella Damas, Rosina Norton, Yankee Rogers, W. A. Barker, Master Clarence and the Burton Bros., and a full brass band and orchestra.

Circuses.

ROBERT T. STICKNEY publishes a card in another column accepting James Melville's challenge inserted in CLIPPER, dated June 3d.

STONE AND MURRAY'S CIRCUS performed in Lowell, Mass., June 13th; Nashua, N. H., 14th; Manchester, 15th; Lawrence, Mass., 16th; Haverhill, 17th, and is billed ahead as follows:—Amesbury Mills, Mass., June 19th; Portsmouth, N. H., 20th; Great Falls, 21st; Saco, Me., 22d; Portland, 23d; Lewiston, 24th; Gardiner, 26th; Augusta, 27th; Waldoboro, 28th; Rockland, 29th, and Camden, 30th.

L. B. LENT'S NEW YORK CIRCUS performed in East Saginaw, Mich., June 15th, and Saginaw City, 16th.

CHIRIBIRI, the equilibrist and wire walker, joined Wooten and Haight's Circus, June 17th.

P. T. BARNUM'S CIRCUS, MENAGERIE AND MUSEUM, which performed in Boston, Mass., during the past week, was so largely attended that it was found necessary to add a morning performance at ten o'clock, making three performances daily. We are authoritatively informed that the attendance at the first day's exhibition was never less than 5,000, while at the other performances people were turned from the doors daily and nightly. The largest tent used for the circus performance now seats 9,300 persons. The daily expenses are $2,500. The show will exhibit only in New England, going east as far as Bangor, Me.

CONCERNING THE GREAT ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC CIRCUS, a correspondent sends the following interesting epistle, dated Chico, Cal., June 4th:—

Since my last writing we have passed over some very rough country, a number of our stands having been among the Sierra Nevada Mountains. On May 30th we performed at San Juan, a mountain town. The chief occupation of the inhabitants is mining, which is carried on very extensively, principally hydraulic; an immense power is produced by conducting mountain streams into the country, conducting them by raceways and sluices down the mountain side, sometimes for fifteen or twenty miles, to some rich district, finally discharging the whole body through a two or three inch nozzle, situated to a stronger base, on this stream. The influence of such tremendous pressure, they wash away in an incredible short space of time large hills, and even mountains have to succumb to it. As the great mass crumbles away, it is carried by the water into sluice boxes, which are furnished with riffles or bottoms, having strips of wood nailed across at regular intervals; these are called riffles, and are sometimes of corrugated iron. The sluices being in sections, the riffles are placed just below where the lap being in sections, the riffles are placed just below where the lap joints; these riffles form a quicksilver, which is kept in constant motion by the flowing water and catches all the passing gold. Most of the metal is caught in this manner before it passes far and about once a month the boxes are cleaned out. Some of these yield as much as $50,000 every thirty or forty days. The sluices generally continue for some distance beyond the riffles; this portion is only taken up once a year, when sometimes a handsome yield is the result. A great many Chinamen are employed in the mines, and were before we performed in San Juan there were four of them buried by an embankment falling upon them. The portion that fell in was the side of the ring used by Castello's party when they were here. We came very near being precipitated from this great excavation ourselves. The ledge that is left is the only available place where a canvas can be put up, and as it is very limited in extent we had to place our dressing room within a few feet of the precipice. The performance was nearly over, a storm, which had been threatening for some time, burst on us suddenly, the first blow coming with a shriek and a force that snapped the side guys like thread, pushing in the side canvas against the people. In a moment, bundles of white men, Indians and Chinese into a promiscuous heap. The main guys held for a few seconds, but the second gust carried everything with it, breaking the centre pole off about four feet from the ground. It struck an Indian on the head, giving him a severe scalp wound, but he showed his contempt for such trifles by assisting us in packing up the canvas. It was very fortunate that most of the horses had been removed or I might have had to chronicle a tragedy, as it was difficult to manage the two or three that were left. And as we were so near the brink of the yawning chasm, with all the lights extinguished, I consider that we were very fortunate in escaping as we did with no one hurt, when a false step would have precipitated us below, a distance of 200 feet. We had arranged for a start immediately after the show, the drive being 32 miles, to another mining town called Downieville, but in consequence of the heavy rains which set in after our blow-down, we were unable to get off until daylight, at which time we started for Downieville, 32 miles, the road being the best stands in the state. We started at 5 P. M., and after traveling the most dangerous road I ever was over, arrived in town at 2 P. M., having passed only one team on the road. The mountain roads in Vermont and New Hampshire are no comparison. Every now and then, and twist around so abruptly that in some places one cannot see thirty feet ahead, with the road only wide enough for one team, except occasional "rests." It is far from amusing to descend these at the pace which we have to travel. The heavy teams had to lay over on the mountain top, and did not get to town till 10 o'clock the next morning. As the rain was falling in torrents it was impossible to show on Sunday night, so we had to telegraph to alter dates, and the rain having ceased we exhibited on Monday night to good business. If we had performed on Sunday or Saturday night there would have been a difference of $1,500 in the receipts, as the miners came in from miles distant. We had to double up all our teams to get over, as the roads were almost impassable. This rain storm is something unprecedented, and as circus people have never anticipate rain after starting out, you can imagine the state of our tent. However, there is not a slot or seam with the canvas that is not waterproof, and we are all lighthearted and anticipate a good season. We had intended to have gone from Downieville across the mountains to Virginia, but the passes were full of snow from ten to twelve feet deep, so we took the back track and show in Marysville on the 5th of June. In passing the telegraph poles in the mountains we frequently see pieces of bears' skins across them, sometimes within three or four feet from the ground. We also see the depth of snow at different seasons; two days ago we passed through two feet of snow, whilst in the valley below the cherries were ripe upon the trees, and are served in abundance on the table. Speaking of fruits, I have seen peaches here weighed over a lb., and strawberries measuring nine inches, everything in proportion. We expect soon to be in the "big tree" district; if so, I will describe to you what I see there.

ROBINSON, SMITH & HENDERSON'S CIRCUS is billed to perform in Plymouth, Ind., June 19th; Bourbon, 20th; Warsaw, 21st; Pierceton, 22d; Columbia, 23d, and Fort Wayne, 24th.

C. G. GRADY'S OLD FASHIONED CIRCUS exhibited in Harrisville, Wis., June 1st; Alpena, 2d and 3d; Saginaw, 5th, and Mackinaw, 6th. They will perform in Chicago, Ill., July 4th, and on the 5th and then will travel by railroad. They are traveling by steamer on the upper lakes and have visited towns that have never been visited by circuses hitherto.

A MALE AND FEMALE RIDER, a female gymnast and a female tight rope performer are wanted by R. Johnson, who advertises.

THE BEFORE, GREAT "FAMINE" BARNUM'S CIRCUS collapsed at Bloomington, Ill., May 27th, as published in a past issue, is utterly without foundation. We received a letter from that town purporting to have been written by a performer setting forth the statement then published. In refutation of that statement we cheerfully give place to the following letter:—

MORRISON, ILL., June 19th, 1871.

FRANK QUINN, EDITOR CLIPPER:—DEAR SIR.—Some evil disposed person (most likely a disbanded candy butcher) has reported to you that the Yankee Robinson Circus bursted at Bloomington, Ill. The facts are that we opened in Lowerville, Ill., on the day advertised and have not lost an hour since, and all goes "as merry as a marriage bell." Signed:—J. V. Smith, Manager; Capt. J. L. Rogers, General Agent; Howard Babcock, Treasurer; Richard Blake, Leader; A. G. Sicker, equestrian director; Judd Webb, Master Balancing; Byron Ross, master of canvas; J. Judge clown; A. Mason, clown; Ed. Lowery, supernumerary; Misco Bros., Delavegian, gymnasts; Miss Kate, equestrienne.

Later intelligence has reached us that a steamer has been chartered, and that the circus will visit the towns on the upper lakes.

W. C. COUP'S COLOSSAL CIRCUS and Animal Show performed in Pleasanton, Mo., June 12th; La Cygne, 13th; Butler, 14th; Papinsville, 15th; Montrose, 16th; Clinton, 17th; Sedalia, 19th; Otterville, 20th; Boonville, 21st; Roanoke, 22d. A correspondent informs us that "while at Plattsburg, Mo., James Heeney, a property boy connected with this circus, was stopped by five mounted men, robbed of ten dollars and shot in the leg, about two inches above the ankle. The company at present consists of the following performers:—The Orton Family—Miles Orton, bareback equestrian; Mrs. Miles Orton, manage; Miss Jessie, slack wire; Master Leon Orton, principal rider; Albert Richards, principal leaper and double summersaulter; Sig. Cappolo, Leon Munson, Ace Barker, Geo. Fish, Sam Flynn, John Naylor, Frank Schoff, Hon king; the Marretas, Risley feat; Master Guido, one of the best gymnasts, and the clowns, Ned Turner and Johnny Carroll.

CHAS. F. REED, rider, leaper, &c., can be engaged, together with his wife, who does a two horse act. Their address is care of this office.

CONCERNING C. W. NOYES' CRESCENT CITY CIRCUS a correspondent traveling with it writes us the following from Houston, Texas, under date of June 1st:—"After a long and terrible hard struggle through rain, mud and everything else known in the annals of show business detrimental to success, we arrived here May 21st, and opened on the 22d for the week, the state fair commencing on the same date, and hoped to do a good business, but, as usual, fortune was against us, and it rained for two days, which ruined both the fair and our business completely. Money is very close here now, owing to the extreme low price of cotton. Old citizens tell me that they have not experienced such a wet winter for twenty years. Mr. Noyes has closed the show here for three months, owing to the condition of his stock, and intends to re-fit and re-organize for the fall and winter season, and start from here."

O'BRIEN'S MENAGERIE exhibited at Auburn, N. Y., June 14th; Springport, 15th; Ithaca, 16th; Ovid, 17th; and they are billed ahead as follows:—Watkins, 19th; Elmira, 20th; Corning, 21st; Bath, 22d; Hornellsville, 23d, and Dansville, 24th.

BARTHOLEMEW'S CALIFORNIA CIRCUS exhibited in Denver, Col., June 9th and 10th, and went thence to Golden City and the mountain towns.

LAKE'S HIPPO-OLYMPIAD performed in Cheyenne, Wyoming, June 12th, for transportation to which point from Omaha, by railroad, they paid $1,500, in advance; Denver, Col., 14th and 15th; Golden City, 16th; Idaho, 17th, and was billed to play in Georgetown, 19th; Central City, 20th and 21st; Border City, 22d; Burlington, 23d; Greely, 24th; Ogden, Utah, 26th; Salt Lake, 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th, and July 3d and 4th. Master Wooda Cook has joined this show, and among the chief features are Mons. Mamker, contortionist and clown; Levi North and his trained horse Lafayette, and Miles as Maseppa, in the equestrian spectacle of that name.

FOREPAUGH'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS is billed to exhibit at Carrollton, O., June 27th; New Philadelphia, 28th; Urichsville, 29th; Newcomerstown, 30th; Coshocton, July 1st, and Dresden, 2d.

JAMES ROBINSON CO.'S CIRCUS is billed to perform in Jamestown, June 19th; Watertown, 20th; Oswego, 21st; Green Bay, 22d; Appleton, 23d; Fond-du-Lac, 24th; Joliet, Ill., 26th.

G. F. BAILEY & CO.'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE performed in Montreal, C. E., June 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th.

SHELDENBURGER & CO.'S COLOSSAL MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS is billed to exhibit at Napoleon, Ohio, June 19th, and from there it goes to Defiance. A correspondent, writing on June 16th, sends the following account of the Sheldenburger Show, having been directly behind two and sometimes three other shows, yet having continually met with much success. Mrs. De Mott, the bareback equestrienne, is riding a splendid act. Her poses are graceful, her figures beautiful, her pirouettes wonderful, and her riding is always received with lavish applause. Signor Emilio, the contortionist, and his songs and jigs are rapturously encored. He dances with a lightness and ease that give to his most comical steps an air of gracefulness, while his budget of songs are sung in a manner that will cause the Irishman to recognize as belonging to the old country. His delineation of an old Irish woman selling "peaches and cakes" is a perfectly irresistible piece of acting, and the "spasmodic jig" at the end of the verses, beyond description. Signor Emilio is known as the best contortionist in America. Master Charles has met with the most certainly deserves. He is painstaking and conscientious and cannot fail to make friends wherever he appears.—Missouri Daily News.

CHAS. F. REED, as the Irish Paddy, gives his audience a specimen of genuine Irish character-acting seldom equalled on the boards of a theatre.—Pittsburgh Sunday Call.

HUTCHINGS' MUSEUM, on Fourth street, St. Louis, Mo., is still doing a good business. A wild Australian child has been added to the other curiosities this week. Mr. Hutchings has displayed considerable enterprise in fitting up this place, and has made it a success. He is now negotiating for the great Australian Bird Show, which will probably be placed on exhibition in a week or two. Dr. McDowell's collection of anatomical specimens is a very interesting feature of the museum, as well as the menagerie of animals, chamber of horrors, infernal regions, etc. So wrote our correspondent on June 16th.

WEISIGER HALL, Louisville, Ky., will be ready to rent to traveling companies about July 1st. Address Jno. M. Boggs, as per advertisement.

PROF. W. G. HART, illusionist, advertises that he can be engaged for the coming season.

W. ARMENTROUT'S LAW RENAVATION is billed to appear in Easton, Pa., June 23d and 24th; Bethlehem, 26th, and Allentown, 27th.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

Dramatic.

THE WHITSUNTIDE HOLIDAYS brought forth some novelties at the minor theatres in London, Eng., of which we have a full account in our advices, which are up to June 3d, although at the central theatres no changes occurred in the programmes. At the Oscart, a dramatization of the late Charles Dickens' novel, by W. E. Gilbert, had been the chief attraction, a full account of which may be found on an outside page.....French plays were being acted at the Lyceum and Opera Comique.....The Christmas bill occurred at the Haymarket, Drury Lane, Olympic, Strand, Gaiety, Prince of Wales, Queen's, or Globe theatres.....At the Adelphi, the new comic ballet, "Fantasticul"; or, The Storm Fiend," had met with success.....Sir Charles Young's play, "Pure Friendship," was being performed at Brighton, May 27th, for the purpose of producing his own play, in four acts and a prologue, entitled "Shadows," the performance of which is thus spoken of:—"Alas! not can be said in favor of it is that it is fairly interesting and not overlong. The plot is artificial. Its dialogue is very poor, and its scheme seems copied from the 'Files de Marbre,' of M. Barriere. Instead of going, like its predecessor, to antique Greece for the prologue to his drama, the author only ventures back to the period of Charles the Second. We there see the young and handsome wife of Stephen Ireskil, a Puritan, requesting much more than is proper will attend Sunday, a gallant of the court, Charles Upton, their flirtation Stephen looks on unobserved. Upton, he challenges and kills the supposed spark, but finds to his horror that his fellow wife, whose Spanish blood rises in rebellion when she sees her lover chin before her eyes. Stephen, dying, places a curse upon any of his descendants who shall marry any of the Ireskils race. In Mr. Young's play Martin Ireskil falls in love with and marries a Spanish woman, apparently false to her husband, but he vows he will conquer her love, and by his own confession he will conquer her die. Beatrice, his wife, is reckless in her expenditure, and soon drags her husband into difficulties. Their home becomes the scene of endless disputes, and at last Martin finds that his wife, to obtain money for her pleasures, has committed forgery. Horrified at the last treachery, he vows ghastly vengeance, when she anticipates him by shutting him in a secret chamber and leaving him to perish. He does not die, however, being released by the timely discovery of a friend. At a critical moment, when Colonel Marwood, the villain of the story, is brooding upon the knowledge he has acquired of the crime of Beatrice, Martin appears and charges him with the murder of Sir Reginald Bramble, Beatrice receives from the Colonel her death wound, and Martin dies soon after of some unprecedented disorder. The piece is not good, but it includes sufficient ability on the part of the author to make it interesting. The acting on the opening day produced dreams. Mrs. Venin, as Beatrice, acted superbly, Mr. Cathies was very good as Martin. The other parts were assigned to Messrs. John and Alfred Nelson, Miss Austin, Mr. Herbert and Mr. H. Dalton. The play will be repeated during whitsun week."

At the Theatre Royal, Melbourne, Australia, on April 15th, the programme consisted of Andrew Halliday's comedy of "Checkmate," after which Donato, the once-jigged dancer, performed a gaiety burlesque, concluding with Brough's burlesque entitled "Pauliomelia."

MISS JULIA DALY was playing in Dundee, Scotland, at our latest advices, and was to have closed there on June 10th.

J. L. TOOLE was announced to have commenced a summer tour, supported by E. Saker's Liverpool company, at Plymouth, Eng., on June 5th, playing there six nights.

MR. AND MRS. HOWARD PAUL were to have commenced a six nights' engagement at Huddersfield, Eng., June 5th.

J. BOLENE GEOYER was announced to have commenced an engagement of twelve nights' duration at Dublin, Ireland, June 12th.

FRANCIS FAIRLEIGH' comedy and burlesque company commenced an engagement at Portsmouth, Eng., June 5d.

RICHARD YOUNGE'S comedy company was to commence an engagement at Newcastle, Eng., June 5th.

MR. SOTHERN'S last dramatic production "Elde" was being acted in Manchester, Eng., at the Prince's Theatre, at our last advices.

THE THEATRE ROYAL at Stamford, Eng., is to be altered into a dish house. It was built in 1768 by Mr. Alderman Clark and James Whitley, comedian, at a cost of £800.

MONTAGUE, JAMES AND THORNE'S comedy company were playing in Liverpool, Eng., at the Alexandra Theatre, at our latest advices. The company from the Brighton, Eng., Aquarium, have commenced a six nights' engagement in Wakefield, Eng., June 5th.

JOHN W. BROOK, the cool, dumb and nearly blind impressionist, was the principal performer for the Royal Hospital for Incurables at Putney Heath, Eng., at the election which took place on May 26th.

THE FIRST PERFORMANCES of the Passion play at Oberammergau, Germany, were to have occurred on the 15th of June. The dates at which it will be repeated are July 2d, 9th, 16th, 23d, 30th; August 6th, 13th, 20th, 27th, and September 3d, 9th, 17th and 24th.

MRS. JOHN WOOD, on the occasion of her benefit at the St. James' Theatre, London, Eng., on June 3d, was presented with a bag of gold, containing one hundred and fifty sovereigns, subscribed by the ladies and gentlemen connected with her last engagement. Mr. Sothern, in presenting it, made a most complimentary speech.

MR. AND MRS. BARNEY WILLIAMS and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence arrived in London, Eng., June 1st.

JAMES MELVILLE, YOUR challenge in the Clipper of June 3d, has just been brought to my notice. I hasten to accept. I will ride your son or any other man in the world, at any time or place, a trial pad, set for any amount. All showmen are well aware that equestrians, especially children, frequently do a star performance on horses of their own; but the true test of the rider is the change of horse and ring.
I propose that we first ride our own acts on our own horses, and then change to others.
If your challenge is newspaper talk, all well. If not, put yourself in communication with me, care of John Robinson's Great Combination Circus and Menagerie, at No. 7, College street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and we can easily arrange preliminaries.
Respectfully yours,
12-1t* ROBERT T. STICKNEY.

3 PROPOSITIONS

To Managers of Traveling Troupes or Stationary Places of Amusement

BY HARRY WESTON,

BUSINESS AGENT.

1st. I will engage as Advance and Business Agent for the sum of $35 per week and expenses, for long or short engagements.
2d. If found incompetent and not thoroughly posted in the most minute details of the position, will ask no salary, except expenses, and instant dismissal expected.
3d. Will guarantee to work up any party or troupe equal to any on the road, providing they have talent to hold the people. I have no opinions of the press to publish, as my time has been devoted exclusively to the interest of the management I represented. They engaging me to work up THEIR entertainment, and NOT my own abilities. Managers are generally considered competent judges of the abilities of their agents and govern themselves accordingly. I publish the above proposition in order to save time and that managers may know the terms. If not requiring my services at present keep them for future reference.
